Time of Departure Depends upon Adjournment of Congress

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Washington, June 11 (AP)—The anniversary next week of President Roosevelt's launching of his 1938 party purge may find the chief executive heading westward to make a long-promised visit to the San Francisco Fair.

Whether he leaves at that time depends upon prospects for adjournment of Congress. He said recently that if Congress would be ready to adjourn by July 15, he would delay his trip until after that date. So far, Congress leaders have been able to kill him only that ending the session by mid-July was a possible, but not probable achievement.

Roosevelt's First Purge

The third session of the last Congress, adjourned on June 18, 1938.
Four days later President Roosevelt issued a broadside in a radio broadcast "on the progress of national affairs." In that report he served notice of his intention to move toward reorganization of "conservative" and "yes-but" Democrats to the Congress now groping toward the end of its session. What followed, including heavy Democratic criticisms in the elections of last November and the failure of virtually every attempt by the president to prevent return of hostile Democratic legislators, is a matter of political history.

That fireside chat, however, inspired a summary of the works of Congress. While that Congress had done one thing, the president said, it had not done many things, on the other hand it had "achieved more for the good of the country than any Congress between the end of the world war and 1933."

Railroad Relief Pending

The present Congress has put through, although in somewhat modified form, at least one of those measures left undone by its predecessors, government reorganization. It has not as yet dealt with the other unfinished item which he noted, the problem of the railroads.

There would be no precedent for similar presidential summary of the works of the 76th Congress mid-way of its life.

Yet it is possible that Mr. Roosevelt might find it expedient to review the rather limited legislative output of this Congress to date, adjournment is long delayed by strategic tactics of opponents of legislative revision.

Whatever might come of a July trip by the president to the West is not in the way of accelerating

Spanish Soldiers Thanked by Pope At Vatican City

Montiff Praises Them for Their Defense of Civilization

Vatican City, June 11 (AP)—Pope
Sixtus XII personally thanked 3,200 Spanish soldiers today for defending "the faith and civilization" of Spain under Generalissimo Francisco.

The pontiff received the veterans of the civil war, who came here to celebrate the victory celebration, along with Serrano Serrano, Franco's father-in-law and interior minister, and General Gastone Gamba, commander of the Italians who fought in Spain.

Expressing sympathy for the soldiers and orphans of the war, the pope urged them to "unite their sorrows with those of Our Father and offer them to the peace of the world."

The pontiff showed the esteem in which he held the soldiers by extending a hand for them to kiss as they passed among them. Ordinarily he does not do that in receiving so large a group.

After sitting upon his throne, the pope said:
"Welcome, leaders, officers and soldiers of Catholic Spain, my most loved sons, who bring to the heart of your father an immense consolation because you have been the defenders of the faith and civilization of your fatherland for which you have given so much."
He told you in his radio message, that he had made sacrifices up to the point of heroism to defend the faith of God and religion and you covered yourself with glory

Bohemia-Moravia Protectorate May Soon Be Abolished

Germany Said To Be Considering Closer Control

Prague, June 11 (AP)—Reports were current tonight that reorganization of Germany's Bohemia-Moravia protectorate might result from incidents in which a Czech and a German policeman were killed.

Some well-informed Czech quarters feared the protectorate might be abolished and some closer union with Germany established.

At any rate, Czechs were expecting an extension of German control in consequence of the fatal shooting of German Police Sergeant Wilhelm Kriest at Kladno last week.

Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, the Reich protector for the area of dissolved Czechoslovakia, had threatened new "restrictive measures" unless Kriest's slaying were solved yesterday but they were withheld, at least temporarily.

Czech Policeman Slain

Meanwhile, a separate incident was disclosed in which Czech Policeman Johann Mueller was slain in a quarrel with German police at Nachod, near the former frontier between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The purpose of tighter German control, according to persistent reports in Prague, would be mainly to strengthen police regulations to prevent clashes between dissatisfied elements of the Czech population and German officials and residents.

Another purpose was described as an effort to reconcile the Czechs to the new order and persuade them to enter into more intimate cultural and political relations with Germany.

Germany's problem, German circles said, was to choose between methods—complete domination by force or an appeasement policy to break down "the passive resistance" which has made the protectorate a troublesome region to govern.

Nazis Seek Appeasement

The course of Nazi policy seemed today to be, at least momentarily, toward appeasement.

Search for the slayer or slayers of Kriest still continued but citizens of the town, held responsible for the policeman's death by having created "an atmosphere conducive to crime," were told that as long as order was preserved there would be no further penalties.

Clergyman Who Married Edward and Mrs. Simpson Destitute in Hollywood

Hollywood, June 11 (AP)—Ill-fortune still dogs the footsteps of the clergyman who performed the ceremony uniting the former King Edward and his twice-divorced wife.

It was two years ago this month that the Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine, former vicar of St. Paul's Darlington, England, found the doors of the church of England closed to him. The 61-year-old minister had defied church authorities by marrying Edward and Wallis Warfield Simpson.

And, today, he said, the churches of America are boycotting him for the part he played in making history.

"Bigotry and persecution have followed us across the sea," Mr. Jardine declared. "My wife and I hardly know where to turn, but we're fighting on. Even though little Christianity is shown me, I shall continue my life's work."

The clergyman and his wife, promise.

Madrid People To Pay 20 Per Cent Tax on Purchases in Cafes and Bars

Living Costs in Spain Are Highest of any Country
in Europe

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Madridenos, facing the highest living costs of any city in Europe, will pay a new tax of 20 per cent on all purchases
at cafes, bars and similar establishments, beginning next Thursday, to help pay Generalissimo Francisco
Franco's soldiers and their families.

The tax has been in effect since
the Civil war began in 1936 in areas
of Spain as conquered by the Nationalists but will be applied this week to Madrid for the first time. It was made effective June 1 in Valencia.

The tax raised billions of pesetas
in Nationalist Spain to help Franco
pay for the war.

The last zones of Republican resistance to fall now are being given their share, the subsidy going to the soldiers and their families until demobilizations are completed and the fighting forces have been absorbed by private and national reconstruction and industries.

Madridenos and inhabitants of other cities are struggling to make ends meet with living costs as much as doubled over pre-war levels. Most laborers are earning the equivalent of 80 cents a day.

The entire nation still is on a partial food-rationing basis, with potatoes, milk, rice, sugar, lentils and meats difficult to obtain and then only with food cards.

Four Killed in Airplane Crash

Three Men and a Woman
Meet Tragic Death in Massachusetts

Monatague, Mass., June 11 (AP)—
Four persons, including one woman,
were killed today when an airplane in which they were riding crashed into brushland. Witnesses said a wing apparently fell off the plane, forcing it into a tailspin.

Those in the plane were tentatively identified as Lester Hodgen, pilot-manager of the nearby Turn-
ers Falls airport; Katherine Welch,
Donald Drew and Howard Glazier,
all of Greenfield.

The plane was reported owned by Beauford Baker, who had purchased it recently.

Hodgen had taken the other three in the plane aloft for a sight-seeing tour of the surrounding countryside,
according to attaches at the airport.

The isolated section where the plane crashed, about one quarter
mile from the nearest country road,
is about three miles from the Turners Falls airport, where the plane
took off.

Five Reformatory Boys Kidnap Warden, Free Him and Escape

Buena Vista, Colo., June 11 (AP)—
Five reformatory inmates kidnaped
Warden Walter H. Johnson today, freed him 15 minutes later and escaped, vowing they would never be taken alive.

Two miles from the reformatory
the five stopped a guard's car they had stolen and said they were going to kill the warden.

He related that as Needham Per-
guson, 23, of Denver, leveled a .30-30 rifle at his chest, another of the group, James Williams, 17, of Lawton, Okla., stepped in front of the gun and protested, "He's been square
with me."

They freed the warden and drove toward Colorado Springs.

All were serving relatively short
terms for burglary and larceny.

The break occurred while Warden Johnson was showing visitors
through the reformatory.

The youths, he said, "jumped on me with three knives. They told
the guard up above they would kill
me if he didn't throw down his
gun. He obeyed. They piled me into a car and started east. It looked like my last ride."

National Income Off 11 Per Cent For the Year '38

Declining Prices and Lower Production Given as Reasons

Report Shows Break in Steady Rise of Last
Five Years

Washington, June 11 (AP)—After rising steadily for five years the national income of the United States
declined to $64,000,000,000 in 1938,
a drop of 11 per cent from the $72-
000,000,000 figure attained in 1937.

The commerce department, in announcing the figures today said the reduction was due to "declining prices
as well as a reduced volume of production."

The $64,000,000,000 total is $16-000,000,000 below the $80,000,000,000
set as the annual income goal of his administration. Nevertheless, it exceeded preliminary estimates of the department.

National income is the total of wages, salaries, dividends, rents and all other payments to individuals.

$500 Per Person
Income of $64,000,000,000 represents an average of about $500 per man, woman and child in the nation.

The $72,000,000,000 of 1937 was the highest figure reached since the national income fell away to $40,000-000,000 at the depth of the depression in 1932. It compares, however, with the 1928 peak of $82,700,000,000.

The report for 1938 measures the
net value of all goods and services produced in the country for the decade from 1929 to 1938, inclusive. In this decade, national income has averaged slightly less than $60,000-000,000 annually.

The average from 1933 to 1938 was about $4,000,000,000 higher than the average for the 1929-1933 period.

The department announced that it had revised upward the national income totals for all of the years
covered by the report, on the basis
of a new census and other data.

Sharp Drop in Five Months
The analysis for 1938 disclosed a sharp drop in income in the first five months followed by a marked recovery during the remainder of the year.

Total compensation paid to employees was 7 per cent lower in 1938
than in 1937, although the share of income distributed to employees in 1938 stood at a new high of 67.3 per cent of aggregate income paid out
in all forms.

Dividends showed the largest decline of income payments in 1938, falling approximately one-third below the $5,400,000,000 level of 1937.

The report said the government's contribution to the national income was higher in 1938 than in any of the ten years covered.

Evangelical and Reformed Church Convenes Today

Frederick, Md., June 11 (AP)—A sermon by the president, Dr. Edwin
M. Sando of Hanover, Pa., will open
the annual meeting of the Potomac
synod of the Evangelical and Reformed church at Hood College tomorrow.

More than 300 ministers and lay delegates from churches in Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Pennsylvania are expected. Preliminary reports to be presented show
213 ministers on the synod rolls,
298 congregations, and a church
membership of 72,912.

The four-day meeting, held jointly with that of the Women's Missionary Society, will hear a report on the general synod meeting by
the Rev. Howard Fox of Gettysburg, Pa. Dr. Henry I. Stahr, president of Hood College, will report for the committee on religious programs
and services.

The Rev. John R. T. Hedeman of
Baltimore will report on home missions and Dr. Edgar F. Hoffmeier of Hanover on foreign ones. The
Rev. Addison H. Groff of Boonsboro will read the evangelism committee report.

Denies Harlan Coal Operators Will Sign Separate Agreements

Huntington, W. Va., June 11 (AP)—
Federal Labor Conciliator John L.
Conner announced here the Harlan coal operators would be released to sign separate wage contracts, but drew quick denials.

"There is nothing to it," said
George Ward, secretary of the association at Harlan, Ky.

Kentucky state labor conciliator
Emmett Durrett and George Titler,
secretary of the Harlan United Mine Workers district, said they had heard nothing of such an agreement.

The Harlan association refused to accept the new Appalachian wage agreement and some of the mines
have been operating under protection of the national guard.

Conner said the announcement
the operators would be released was made at a conference in Governor
Chandler's office at Frankfort.

Youth had its fling too as Ernest
Bloom, a red-haired mountain boy,

Ciano To Visit Franco in Move For Political and Military Pact

Italian Foreign Minister Is Expected in Madrid
Soon

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Spanish
newspapers reported today Italian
Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo
Ciano would visit Generalissimo
Francisco Franco soon and suggested the possibility Spain may join Italy in a political and military accord similar to the ties between Rome and Berlin.

Reports that Count Ciano possibly would come to Spain June 21 were banned-lined in the newspapers which said his conversations with Franco "may resolve a political-military accord between Madrid and Rome." They also raised the possibility of a similar link between Madrid and Berlin.

(In Rome it was said reports of a forthcoming visit by Count Ciano
to Madrid had circulated for weeks
but no definite announcement has been made.)

(Both Germany and Italy aided Generalissimo Franco in the Spanish civil war. They signed a military pact May 22.)

Spain would be a powerful ally
for the axis nations, particularly for any operations in the Mediterranean
and North Africa.

Spain repeatedly has demonstrated close friendship with Italy
and Germany and in both of those nations there now are Spanish missions which accompanied legionnaires returning from victorious
participation in the civil war.

Spaniards were agreed, however,
that Generalissimo Franco would go
very slowly before committing his nation to any agreement calling for military aid.

The Nationalist leader has declared Spain's first concern now was her reconstruction.

4,000 from Many States Attend Ninth American Folk Song Party

Ashland, Ky., June 11 (AP)—Despite the threat of rain, more than 4,000 persons from many states gathered at the "Traipsin' Woman" cabin, 16 miles from here on the scenic Mayo trail, as the blowing of an old cow horn opened the ninth American folk song festival today.

Dressed in traditional costumes, minstrels from the Eastern Kentucky mountains sang centuries-old ballads and hymns that were carried to the hillside audience by a modern sound system, newly-installed so all might hear.

The mournful song of Rowan county's Gregorian Chanters and the plaintive music of the Dulcimer, an ancient stringed instrument rarely heard outside the mountains, echoed through the trees around the log cabin as well as rollicking, it aged, tunes.

Youth had its fling too as Ernest
Bloom, a red-haired mountain boy,
would be a two-day affair.

in homespun jeans, sang "T'is Tune Up My Fiddle" while he worked
away on a corn-stalk "instrument."

A Lincolnshire folk dance with music by a piper set the scene of the festival while the prologue traced the connection of the Kentucky hill folk with old England.

The traditional "Infare-Wedding"
stressed the festival's revival of mountain customs handed down
from generation to generation.

Four little Rowan county girls accompanied Mrs. Lydie Messerscaudill, who claims descent from Mary,
Queen of Scots, in a Scotch "Scolding" ballad.

Jean Thomas, the organizer, announced that beginning next year
the festival, organized to "perpetuate
mountainers by their ancestors.

Madrid People To Pay 20 Per Cent Tax on Purchases in Cafes and Bars

Living Costs in Spain Are Highest of any Country
in Europe

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Madridenos,
facing the highest living costs of
any city in Europe, will pay a new
tax of 20 per cent on all purchases
at cafes, bars and similar establishments, beginning next Thursday, to help pay Generalissimo Francisco
Franco's soldiers and their families.
The tax has been in effect since
the Civil war began in 1936 in areas
of Spain as conquered by the Nationalists but will be applied this week to Madrid for the first time. It was made effective June 1 in Valencia.

The tax raised billions of pesetas
in Nationalist Spain to help Franco
pay for the war.

The last zones of Republican resistance to fall now are being given
their share, the subsidy going to the soldiers and their families until demobilizations are completed and the
fighting forces have been absorbed by private and national reconstruction and industries.

Madridenos and inhabitants of
other cities are struggling to make
ends meet with living costs as much
as doubled over pre-war levels. Most laborers are earning the equivalent
of 80 cents a day.

The entire nation still is on a partial food rationing basis, with potatoes, milk, rice, sugar, lentils and meats difficult to obtain and then
only with food cards.

Girl Kidnaped Says She Is Not Crazy

San Francisco, June 11 (AP)—Margaret Polly Weil, held for the kidnaping of five-year-old Krehe Osborn, said today: "I may have done something nutty, but I positively am not crazy."

She made the statement from her jail cell as authorities continued to ponder their course of action against the Nassau, N. Y., farm girl who, hungry for travel and pleasure, left a $1,600 ransom note when she took the boy.

Public Defender Gerald Kenny said he was investigating the possibility the girl, captured at San Jose 27 hours after abducting the boy from his home here, was only 17 years old instead of 18.

In the event she is younger than she said, Kenny explained her case would be handled by the juvenile court. Kenny also was considering the possibility of a sanity test, despite Miss Weil's insistence she is sane.

She was employed at the time of the kidnaping as a governess for the boy.

Blind Member of Choir Drops Dead While Singing Hymn

Easton, Md., June 11 (AP)— Frank G. Garey, 73-year-old blind member of the Calvary Methodist church choir 53 years, sang with the choir for the last time tonight.

While singing the hymn "Savior More Than Life to Me," with the choir and congregation, Garey was stricken with a heart attack and dropped dead.

As he fell to the floor services stopped automatically.
Fellow choir members carried him to a Sunday school room downstairs, but efforts to revive him failed.

Upstairs services were resumed. Not until they were completed did Rev. Thomas Jones tell the congregation the blind singer who had reported to the choir last regularly for more than half a century had died.

Four Killed in Airplane Crash

Meet Tragic Death in Massachusetts

Monatogue, Mass., June 11 (AP)—
Four persons, including one woman,
were killed today when an airplane in which they were riding
crashed into brushland. Witnesses
said a wing apparently fell off the plane, forcing it into a tailspin.

Those in the plane were tentatively identified as Lester Hodgen,
pilot-manager of the nearby Turn-
ers Falls airport; Katherine Welch,
Donald Drew and Howard Glazier,
all of Greenfield.

The plane was reported owned by Beauford Bate, who had purchased
it recently.

Hodgen had taken the other three
in the plane aloft for a sight-seeing
tour of the surrounding countryside,
according to attaches at the airport.
The isolated section where the
plane crashed, about one quarter
mile from the nearest country road,
is about three miles from the Turn-
took off.

Buena Vista, Colo., June 11 (AP)—
Five reformatory inmates kidnaped
Warden Walter H. Johnson today,
freed him 15 minutes later and escaped, vowing they would never be taken alive.

Two miles from the reformatory
the five stopped a guard's car they
to kill the warden.

He related that as Needham Per-
guson, 23, of Denver, leveled a .30-30 rifle at his chest, another of the group, James Williams, 17, of Lawton, Okla., stepped in front of the gun and protested, "He's been square
with me."

toward Colorado Springs.
All were serving relatively short
terms for burglary and larceny.
The break occurred while Warden Johnson was showing visitors
through the reformatory.

The youths, he said, "jumped on me with three knives. They told
the guard up above they would kill
me if he didn't throw down his
gun. He obeyed. They piled me into a car and started east. It looked like my last ride."

National Income Off 11 Per Cent For the Year '38

Declining Prices and Lower Production Given as

Report Shows Break in Steady Rise of Last
Five Years

Washington, June 11 (AP)—After rising steadily for five years the national income of the United States
declined to $64,000,000,000 in 1938,
a drop of 11 per cent from the $72-
000,000,000 figure attained in 1937.
The commerce department, in announcing the figures today said the reduction was due to "declining prices
as well as a reduced volume of
production."

The $64,000,000,000 total is $16-
set as the annual income goal of his administration. Nevertheless, it ex-
department.

National income is the total of
wages, salaries, dividends, rents and

$500 Per Person
Income of $64,000,000,000 represents an average of about $500 per man, woman and child in the nation.

The $72,000,000,000 of 1937 was the highest figure reached since the national income fell away to $40,000-000,000 at the depth of the depression in 1932. It compares, however,
with the 1928 peak of $82,700,000,000.

The report for 1938 measures the
net value of all goods and services
produced in the country for the decade from 1929 to 1938, inclusive. In
this decade, national income has averaged slightly less than $60,000-000,000 annually.

The average from 1933 to 1938 was about $40,000,000,000 higher than the average for the 1929-1933 period.
The department announced that it had revised upward the national income totals for all of the years
covered by the report, on the basis
of a new census and other data.

Sharp Drop in Five Months
The analysis for 1938 disclosed a sharp drop in income in the first five months followed by a marked recovery during the remainder of the year.

Total compensation paid to employees was 7 per cent lower in 1938
than in 1937, although the share of income distributed to employees in 1938 stood at a new high of 67.3 per cent of aggregate income paid out
in all forms.

Dividends showed the largest decline of income payments in 1938,
falling approximately one-third below the $5,400,000,000 level of 1937.
The report said the government's contribution to the national income
was higher in 1938 than in any of the ten years covered.

Frederick, Md., June 11 (AP)—A
sermon by the president, Dr. Edwin
M. Sando of Hanover, Pa., will open
the annual meeting of the Potomac
synod of the Evangelical and Reformed church at Hood College tomorrow.

delegates from churches in Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Pennsylvania are expected. Preliminary reports to be presented show
213 ministers on the synod rolls,
298 congregations, and a church
membership of 72,912.

The four-day meeting, held jointly with that of the Women's Missionary Society, will hear a report
the Rev. Howard Fox of Gettysburg,
Pa. Dr. Henry I. Stahr, president
of Hood College, will report for the committee on religious programs
and services.

The Rev. John R. T. Hedeman of
Baltimore will report on home missions and Dr. Edgar F. Hoffmeister
of Hanover on foreign ones. The
Rev. Addison H. Groff of Boons-
boro will read the evangelism committee report.

Denies Harlan Coal Operators Will Sign Separate Agreements

Huntington, W. Va., June 11 (AP)—
Federal Labor Conciliator John L.
Conner announced here the Harlan
coal operators would be released to sign separate wage contracts, but drew quick denials.

"There is nothing in it," said
George Ward, secretary of the association at Harlan, Ky.

Kentucky state labor conciliator
Emmett Durrett and George Titler,
secretary of the Harlan United Mine Workers district, said they had heard nothing of such an agreement.

The Harlan association refused to accept the new Appalachian wage
agreement and some of the mines
have been operating under protection of the national guard.

Conner said the announcement
the operators would be released was made at a conference in Governor
Chandler's office at Frankfort.

Ciano To Visit Franco in Move For Political and Military Pact

Italian Foreign Minister Is Expected in Madrid
Soon

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Spanish
Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo
Ciano would visit Generalissimo
Francisco Franco soon and suggested the possibility Spain may join Italy in a political and military
accord similar to the ties between

Reports that Count Ciano possibly would come to Spain June 21 were banned-lined in the newspapers
which said his conversations with Franco "may resolve a political-military accord between Madrid and Rome." They also raised the possi-
Madrid and Berlin.

(In Rome it was said reports of
a forthcoming visit by Count Ciano
to Madrid had circulated for weeks
but no definite announcement has been made.)

(Both Germany and Italy aided Generalissimo Franco in the Spanish civil war. They signed a military pact May 22.)

Spain would be a powerful ally
for the axis nations, particularly for
and North Africa.

Ciano repeatedly has demonstrated close friendship with Italy
and Germany and in both of those nations there now are Spanish
missions which accompanied legionnaires returning from victorious
participation in the civil war.

Spaniards were agreed, however,
that Generalissimo Franco would go
very slowly before committing his nation to any agreement calling for military aid.

The Nationalist leader has declared Spain's first concern now was her reconstruction.

Giants Buy Jensen

New York, June 11 (AP)—The New York Giants announced tonight they had purchased outfielder Forrest Jensen from the Pittsburgh Pirates with the intention of shunting him to their Jersey City farm in the International League.

In homespun jeans, sang "T'N Tune
Up My Fiddle" while he worked
away on a corn-stalk "instrument."

A Lincolnshire folk dance with
music by a piper set the scene of
the festival while the prologue
traced the connection of the Kentucky hill folk with old England.

The traditional "Infare-Wedding"
stressed the festival's revival of
mountain customs handed down
from generation to generation.

companied Mrs. Lydie Messeraudill,
who claims descent from Mary Queen of Scots, in a Scotch "Scolding" ballad.

Jean Thomas, the organizer, announced that beginning next year
the festival, organized to "perpetuate
mountainers by their ancestors.

Youth had its fling too as Ernest
Edmon, a red-haired mountain boy, would be a two-day affair.

Pork and Beans and Other Strictly American Dishes Served to Royal Couple by the Roosevelts

Attend Episcopal Church and Are Welcomed by Minister; Enjoy Rest
after Day in New York

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 11 (AP)—
The king and queen of England, having sampled American ways for four days, started back to Canada tonight on their return home.

The blue and silver royal train pulled out of the Hyde Park station at 10:09 p. m.
(EST) after their majesties had spent a restful informal night and day at President Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate.

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 11 (AP)—
The king and queen of England appropriately ate American hot dogs and drank beer picnic-fashion today on the scenic bluff that shoulders the estate of President Roosevelt high above the Hudson river.

Pork and Beans—a commoner dish—also was on the menu for royalty, along with many other snacks of peculiarly American quality and tradition.

George and Elizabeth, who eat off gold whenever they want to at home and did so at the state dinner in the White House, ate off paper dishes set out by the president and his wife in true picnic style.

Enjoy Relaxation

Their majesties were reported to have thoroughly enjoyed the rusti-cating relaxation and strange food after tumultuous receptions and long drives through vastly populated lanes in Washington and New York
earlier in the weekend.

So informal was the afternoon that finally they dispensed entirely with handshaking the president's other guests. They just chatted and roamed about under the trees that protected them from a hot sun—leafy fringes that all but blotted out the route down which Benedict Arnold retreated from West Point, bent on betraying the American colonists on behalf of their royal ancestor, George III.

King Gets Fast Ride
After the picnic, the president—whose swift driving once made the king grab frantically for his hat—took his guests down to the Val Kill cottage for tea, but one look at the blue-tinted, spray-rippled water of the swimming pool was enough to change the plans of president and king.

They went swimming together—for the second time, it was disclosed,

Chamberlain To Face Fight Over Foreign Policies

Will Be Asked To Explain Course at Session of Parliament

London, June 11 (AP)—Britain's efforts to bring Soviet Russia into the British-French front were overshadowed today by a barrage of criticism growing out of what opponents of the government called "appeasement" gestures toward Germany and Italy.

The new attacks, added to increasing demands for a cabinet shakeup, created an important political problem for Prime Minister Chamberlain in view of reports that the date for a general election was set this week end for the first week in October.

The Prime Minister will be asked in parliament tomorrow to explain the purpose of conciliatory statements made to parliament Thursday both by himself and his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax.

Leaders Are Opposed

Despite denials in official circles of any intention to return to an "appeasement" policy, opposition leaders and a large section of the press viewed with suspicion their offers to discuss Rome-Berlin Axis
"aspirations."

Arthur Greenwood, acting labor party leader, said in a speech last night that the government "declares itself favorable to pacts of mutual assistance but it is not at all clear that it would not crawl back to the discredited plan of appeasement if even a shadow of an opportunity presented itself."

Greenwood already has served notice he would ask Chamberlain tomorrow whether the government has any intention of trying to nego-

Committee Favors Large Reduction In Army Planes

Would Limit Number for Army Air Corps to 4,300

5,500 PROPOSED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

But Way Is Left Open for Him To Get Them If They Are Needed

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Informed legislators said today that a House appropriation subcommittee had agreed to recommend that the proposed expansion of the army air corps be limited to about 4,300 planes instead of the 5,500 proposed by President Roosevelt.

The subcommittee so worded its proposal, however, that the chief executive would have discretionary power to authorize the additional 1,200 planes if he deemed it advisable.

House leaders said that although the measure carrying funds to complete the president's emergency national defense program, would be endorsed by the full appropriations committee tomorrow, it probably would not reach the House floor until next week.

Cut Another Appropriation

The subcommittee also cut in half a $32,500,000 appropriation for so-called "education orders" to train industry in munitions manufacture. Members explained, however, the proposed expenditure covered a two-year program so that the subcommittee actually did was to provide the first year's funds.

The group also effected some reduction in the $27,000,000 item to finance an increase in the Panama canal zone garrison. Members said this cut was approximately $500,000. Congress already has given the army $50,000,000 which has been used to purchase more than 500 new pursuit planes and attack bombers. In addition, $110,000,000 has been provided for the purchase of so-called "critical" equipment such as semi-automatic rifles, anti-tank guns, new tanks, gas masks, anti-aircraft guns and ammunition.

Build Up Reserve Stocks

Meanwhile, both the army and navy are preparing to build up the nation's stock of raw materials essential to the prosecution of a war. Officials said today that orders would be placed in the next twelve months for $10,000,000 worth of such materials. They expected this Congress to appropriate that sum as a start toward accumulating a $100,000,000 store of "strategic" and "critical" minerals and other supplies, mostly produced abroad.

The reserve, a phase of the current reinforcement of land, sea and air defenses, was authorized in a bill which President Roosevelt signed last week to lessen and prevent a "dangerous and costly dependence" upon foreign nations.

Great Britain and Italian claims for colonies and economic "living space."

Under the heading, "It is a betrayal," the left-wing Reynold's weekly commented:

"Is Lord Halifax's offer to discuss Colonial problems with dictators an honest attempt to dispel from German minds the threat of encirclement or a dishonest return to the policy of appeasement?"

Move Called Ill-Timed

"Certain it is ill-timed. It will raise in Russia as well as in this country doubts as to whether Great Britain is single-minded in rebuilding a peace front in Europe."

"It will set in motion a train of evil speculation on the possibilities of reviving Mr. Chamberlain's discredited policy of doing a deal with dictators at the expense of other nations."

The Sunday pictorial observed that "the Prime Minister is convinced—even now—that soothing words and promises of economic benefits will draw Hitler and Mussolini to a conference table and he is determined to go all out for appeasement with Germany."

Captain John Smuts Dies at Age 66

Boston, June 11 (AP)—Captain John Smuts, 66, widower of May Yoh, who at one time owned the renowned but luckless Hope diamond, and nephew of the famed British South African General, Jan C. Smuts, died suddenly today of a heart attack.

A veteran of the Boer and World wars, Captain Smuts had lived in virtual obscurity since scattering the ashes of his actress wife upon the Atlantic ocean last Sept. 3 in accordance with her dying wish, made a few days earlier.

Wall Street's Investment Machine Shows Signs of Hitting Stride

Revival of New Financing Is Encouraging to Traders

By Frederick Gardner

New York, June 11 (AP)—Wall Street's investment machinery has begun to move again in a renewed effort by private bankers to bridge the gap between idle money and idle men.

A revival in new financing for corporate and municipal account, to many Wall Street observers, was the most striking development last week of a somewhat improved business picture.

Municipal and corporate flotations for a seven-day period ended Thursday totaled $223,000,000, the largest for any similar period since February, 1937. Several additions to the SEC registry list raised the amount of corporate loans in sight for public offerings in the next few weeks to more than $165,000,000.

Bond men welcomed this resumption of financing after several months of inactivity but were reluctant to label it a real recovery in private investment until they get better insight into how far it may go. On previous occasions the last few years, notably in 1936 and early 1937, there have been worthwhile starts toward revival of private investment, only to be cut short before much headway was made in utilizing stagnant capital.

Unprecedented low money rates and record idle funds in banks and other institutions, it was pointed out, are exerting powerful force for resumption of new financing. This situation has been reflected in a rise in prices on U. S. treasury loans until the average yield on long-term issues has fallen close to 2 per cent.

Steel and automobile industries, on the front-line of capital goods, led the way in further rise in industrial barometers last week but much room remained for further improvement, analysts reminded.

Steel makers, regaining most of the spring loss accompanying the recent war scare and the soft coal mining stoppage, boosted operating schedules to 54.2 per cent of capacity, the highest in two months.

Automobile output doubled as assemblies were stepped up after the Memorial Day interruption and the ending of the strike in the Briggs body plants at Detroit.

The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity, following six months of slow decline, extended its late spring rise. It advanced to 84.5 compared with a mid-way low of 81.8.

Stocks followed the business barometers on a slow upswing but dealings remained quiet.

Spain Continues Roundup Of Republican Culprits

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Civil guards today seized 150 persons in Toledo on charges of assassinations, looting, robberies and denunciations of nationalists when Toledo province was in Republican hands during the civil war.

The government also completed establishment of nation-wide tribunals to try persons accused of contributing to prolongation of the civil war.

Elephant Loses Temper

Cincinnati, June 11 (AP)—Rosie, a circus elephant, went into a momentary rage while being unloaded here today and hurled Harry P. Hannon, a watchman, to the ground and stepped on him before he was rescued by trainers.

Hannon, suffering with a crushed chest and broken ribs, was described in a "fair" condition by hospital attendants.

Cumberland Woman To Report on Publications At State PTA Conference

Towson, Md., June 11 (AP)—The problems of little Johnny's behavior at home and at school will be thrashed out over the council table at the annual State Parent-Teacher conference June 19-21.

Executives of the state school system will speak daily on "our schools," covering grade and high schools and the State Teacher College. State executives of the PTA will discuss the mechanics of the councils, the PTA's legislative program, and cooperation in child health activities.

Delegates will register at the teacher college here and will be greeted by Mrs. Homer V. Hart of Annapolis, state president. Mrs. Robert G. Doty of Cumberland will report on the Congress's publications and Mrs. Milton D. Moore of Hagerstown will discuss establishment of programs. Dr. M. Theresa Weidfeld, president of the college, will talk on its place in the educational picture.

Thomas G. Pullen, administration assistant to the superintendent of schools, will speak on "our schools" the second day. Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins of Washington, a former executive of the National PTA, will follow with a discussion of the national work of the group. S. Denmead Kolb of Salisbury, second vice-president, will summarize the results of the legislative program.

Prosecutor Seeks More Indictments in Phila. Insurance Murders

Philadelphia, June 11 (AP)—Prosecuting Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt said tonight 24 new indictments would be sought this week in Philadelphia's insurance murder case, but that he plans no further trials until September.

"For one thing, it's too hot now for trials," he said. "For another, we have too much work to do."

The June grand jury will be asked to return general conspiracy indictments in a move McDevitt said he hoped would build up a comprehensive picture of the intricate and far-reaching connections between the major and minor figures in the mass slay-for-pay scheme that cost scores of lives in several states.

The new indictments will be pointed at eleven of approximately two dozen persons arrested in the case. All have been arraigned. Some already are under indictment on various charges.

In the first two cases to come to trial, one defendant was convicted with a mandatory death sentence and the other made a court room confession.

Ruth Marie Rubens Is Missing Again

Moscow, June 11 (AP)—Ruth Marie Rubens, the mysterious American who vanished in December, 1937, only to turn up later in a Soviet Russian prison, has disappeared again.

The presiding judge of a Soviet court last Friday told her in the presence of a dozen foreign correspondents and two United States embassy representatives that she would be set free yesterday—having served an 18-month prison sentence for entering Russia without a passport.

Therefore she presumably was released yesterday. Since Friday, however, both Soviet authorities and the United States embassy have professed to have no information concerning her whereabouts.

One unconfirmed report circulated that she was placed aboard a train bound for the western border today.

There had been reports that she might go to the United States to appear in connection with a government investigation of alleged passport frauds in New York.

Six Killed, 50 Injured as Storm Sweeps through Six Midwest States

Property Damage Will Run into Hundreds of Thousands

Indianapolis, June 11 (AP)—Indiana counted today three dead and Ohio two and Wisconsin one, in the wake of a June storm which slashed through six western states injuring more than fifty persons and causing hundreds of thousands of dollars in property damage.

The high wind, rain and lightning swept across this state, and parts of Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Kentucky last night. Houses were destroyed, utility services disrupted and hundreds of trees were blown down.

Indiana's dead:

Child Dies in Wreck

Martel Briles, 8, killed near Swayzee when an automobile carrying 10 persons through the rain ran into a tree felled across a road.

Gerald W. Brown, 26, crushed to death at Schneider as an implement supply house was blown down.

Charles Weiss, 59, farmer, injured fatally near Logansport when a truck traveling through a heavy rain knocked him from his bicycle.

A Beloit, Wis., baby died when her jugular vein was cut by glass as a small garage was blown against a house.

Mrs. Harry Metz was killed on a Hicksville, O., street when the wind blew a tree across the automobile in which she was riding. Numerous buildings were unroofed in this town and other communities in the section.

George W. Dougherty, 42, of Elyria, O., drowned when his fishing boat capsized as the storm churned Lake Erie.

Coast Guards Rescue 50

Coast guards rescued at least 50 persons from boats and breakwaters in the Lorain-Cleveland district marooned along the lake.

Jacksonville was hit hardest in Illinois. More than 20 homes were damaged at an estimated loss of $100,000. More than an inch of rain fell in Chicago, Louisville and Indianapolis.

Utilities were crippled and buildings damaged at Adrain and other Southern Michigan cities.

Many sections of Louisville and surrounding communities were without electric service as the storm hit there.

Two Persons Drown In Baltimore Area

Baltimore, June 11 (AP)—Two persons were drowned today as high temperatures and humidity combined to drive holiday crowds to the water.

One of the victims was Thelma Hopkins, 16, drowned while rescuing Thelma Brady, 14. The girls were bathing when the younger one waded over her depth. Miss Hopkins dragged the screaming girl into shallow water and bystanders brought her to shore. Meanwhile, Miss Hopkins had disappeared. By the time her body was recovered, she was dead.

The other victim was Mrs. Lerene Treman, 25, who was thrown into the Patuxent river with four companions when a lifeboat overturned near the city airport.

Mrs. Treman sank after her companions got her to within 75 feet of shore. Her husband, S. Michael Treman, was taken from the water by a Pan-American Airways launch which was awaiting the arrival of the Bermuda Clipper.

The president's wife wore a silk chiffon dress in a print designed by her niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, II. A tucked blouse was divided from the skirt by a belt of royal blue, her wide-brimmed hat and purple were the same shade. She carried white gloves.

In the car with the first ladies of the two lands was the president's mother, wearing a black chiffon dress with white roses and a black turban.

MacKenzie King Present

Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada rode along to church as did the president's eldest son, James, with Betsy, his wife, and Sara, his eight-year-old daughter.

In a group confessional, the king and queen, president and Mrs. Roosevelt, joined in the words: "let us humbly confess our sins before Almighty God." Bishop Tucker gave absolution.

Prayers were given for peace and grace and there was a special prayer for "Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary and Princess Elizabeth," with Mr. Wilson asking God to "give them grace and happiness and bring them to Thy kingdom."

In the sermon Bishop Tucker asserted that "we can love our neighbors as ourselves only when we make the definition of neighbor all-inclusive."

"But sometimes," he added, "our interests in our own country have led to extreme nationalism, race prejudice and sectarian persecution."

Arthur Degroff, a vestryman, proctor of a bus line and manager of the Hyde Park baseball team, passed a silver collection plate to the president and his royal guests.

Although the king ordinarily does not carry money, he dropped in some folded bills—American money.

Marshland Fires To Be Curbed by State

Crisfield, Md., June 11 (AP)—Fires in Eastern Shore marshland, which have a definite effect on muskrats and wild fowl, will be the object of state control if a group of landowners have their way.

Assistant State Forester Walter J. Quick, said the group, whose property totals 3,850 acres, told Forest Warden Fred Waters that they favored fire control provisions.

Some residents claim fires, by clearing the land for new growth, improve conditions for wild life.

"NO HOPE IN CUBA"

Lawrence Berenson, of Miami, Fla., attorney for the National Coordinating Committee to Aid Refugees, in constant touch with the 907 Jews aboard the German liner St. Louis, tells of their plight. He stated the Cuban government would not relent and permit the refugees to land.

Two Killed in Plane Accident

Kenosha, Wis., June 11 (AP)—A pilot flying a borrowed monoplane and his passenger were killed today when the plane crashed near the Kenosha country club, seven miles north of the city.

The pilot was Magnus Jacobson, 35, of Racine, and the passenger was identified as Richard D. Kider, 19, of Racine, who returned yesterday after graduating from the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Theodore Sokow, a Kenosha physician, and his son John, playing golf, witnessed the crash.

Roosevelt Party Purge Discussed as a Possibility

third-term talk, there is nothing yet to suggest that the 1938 Liberal party purge is to be projected into the Democratic primaries of 1940.

By the same token, there is no guarantee against it to be read into recent Roosevelt addresses stressing again his demand that the party remain "uncompromisingly liberal."

There is a formidable list of Senate Democrats who might conceivably rate 1940 opposition by the president to renomination if the mood of his June, 1938, speech prevailed.

Such senators as Byrd in Virginia, Holt in West Virginia, Burke in Nebraska, King in Utah and Gerry in Rhode Island will be up. Also up will be Wheeler of Montana who led the 1937 coalition fight against the Supreme Court enlargement bill, and O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Connally of Texas, who opposed the bill.

A year ago Mr. Roosevelt said that the court bill fight was "a lost battle which won a war." Except for that implication that the incident was to be forgotten, any or all of these senators might look with personal apprehension on the growing Roosevelt third-term talk.

Pershing Not Ill He Says in Paris

Paris, June 11 (AP)—General John J. Pershing, 78-year-old A. E. F. commander in the world war, went for a drive in Paris today after spending several days in bed resting from his trip from the United States.

Associates earlier had said he suffered a heart attack yesterday but the general scorned these reports with the statement:

"Me ill? It's ridiculous!"

Pershing, who came to France last week as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, said he had been tired out by his trip—his 71st Atlantic voyage—and had stayed in bed several days resting.

He said his condition was good and there was no cause for alarm.

Later, striding briskly through his hotel lobby, he went for an automobile drive.

Gels Wooden Leg Caught in Wreck

Seattle, June 11 (AP)—Piteque cries of Anton Sather, 70, begging them to hurry spurred rescuers as they frantically tried to free his leg from wreckage of his automobile after it had been struck by a train.

"Please hurry," Sather urged. But when the ambulance arrived, Sather said calmly:

"You won't need that. It was my wooden leg that was caught."

"Then what was your hurry?" a perspiring rescuer demanded.

"I didn't want to be late to work."

And to work he went, after having minor cuts treated. Not even the wooden leg was damaged seriously.

Neutrality Act Opponents Claim Strong Support

Senators Threaten To Prolong Session Until Mid-August

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Senate opponents of neutrality law revision claimed today to have the support of at least 24 senators and said they would serve notice on administration that if it insisted on repeal of the arms embargo would be a fight certain to prolong the session at least until mid-August.

A member of the group said the word would be carried to President Roosevelt early this week by a senator who thus far has taken no active part in the neutrality controversy. The chief executive is due to return tomorrow night from his trip to Hyde Park and West Point, N. Y.

Roosevelt Checking Senate

There were indications, meantime, that the administration was conducting its own private check of Senate sentiment on the proposal. Secretary of State Hull said the arms embargo was discarded in favor of a system of presidential control of wartime shipping.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, said, however, that he thought Congressional leaders would have little more information to give the president Tuesday about a prospective adjournment date than last week when they were understood to have told him in effect that all legislation except neutrality could be cleaned up by July 15.

Both Senate and House foreign committees may consider neutrality legislation this week.

Discuss King's Visit

There was some discussion of senatorial circles of the possible effect of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth on the neutrality controversy. Opponents said that the Hull proposals would be of direct benefit to England, in event of war in Europe, because control of the seas likely would enable her to obtain munitions here while cutting off the shipping to her opponent.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.), member of the Foreign Relations committee, said he believed the visit had "softened" some of the congressional criticism of Great Britain's policies.

On the other hand, Senator Borah (R-Idaho), who has been consistent critic of Great Britain's course, indicated clearly that his ideas had not been changed by his contact with the sovereigns of the nation.

Congress To Slow Speed

With neutrality apparently the only issue threatening major controversy, Congress will hasten the week to clear its docket of other legislation.

The Senate Finance Committee is to take up tomorrow, with Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the social security board as its first witness, amendments to the social security act which were approved by the House yesterday.

These amendments provide for starting old age payments next year instead of in 1942, and for increasing payments in the early years of the act's operation. In addition, coverage would be extended to new groups of workers.

James H. Pugh Named To State Commission

Annapolis, Md., June 11 (AP)—James H. Pugh, former state's attorney for Montgomery county, was appointed a member of the State Industrial Accident Commission today by Governor O'Connor.

He will succeed Omar D. Crothers, Democrat, whose term had expired. Pugh, a resident of Chevy Chase, will serve five years in the $5,000-a-year post.

He has maintained a law practice in Rockville and formerly was affiliated with a real estate firm in Washington, D. C.

Three Killed in Auto Crash near Portsmouth

Portsmouth, O., June 11 (AP)—Three persons were killed and critically injured today in an automobile accident ten miles west of Portsmouth on state route 125.

The dead, all residents of the Adams county community of Bluff Creek, were: Chester Cooper, 17; Robert Artrup, 9, and Sheila Artrup, 14.

Reported in a serious condition at a Portsmouth hospital were Mrs. Julia Artrup, about 30, mother of the dead children, and William Artrup, 12, another son.

Dr. J. D. Rose, Scioto county coroner, said he was informed the Cooper, driver of the automobile, in which the Artrups were riding, lost control of the machine while attempting to pass a number of cars on the highway.

Committee Favors Large Reduction In Army Planes

But Way Is Left Open for Him To Get Them If They Are Needed

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Informed legislators said today that a House subcommittee had agreed to recommend that the proposed expansion of the army air corps be limited to about 4,300 planes instead of the 5,500 proposed by President Roosevelt.

The subcommittee also worded its proposal, however, that the chief executive would have discretionary power to authorize the additional 1,200 planes if he deemed it advisable.

House leaders said that although the measure carrying funds to complete the president's emergency national defense program, would be endorsed by the full appropriations committee tomorrow, it probably would not reach the House floor until next week.

Cut Another Appropriation

The subcommittee also cut in half a $32,500,000 appropriation for so-called "education orders" to train industry in munitions manufacture. Members explained, however, the proposed expenditure covered a two-year program so that the subcommittee actually did was to provide the first year's funds.

The group also effected some reduction in the $27,000,000 item to finance an increase in the Panama canal zone garrison. Members said this cut was approximately $500,000. Congress already has given the army $50,000,000 which has been used to purchase more than 500 new pursuit planes and attack bombers. In addition, $110,000,000 has been provided for the purchase of so-called "critical" equipment such as anti-aircraft guns, tanks, anti-tank guns, new tanks, gas masks, anti-aircraft guns and ammunition.

Build Up Reserve Stocks

Meanwhile, both the army and navy are preparing to build up the nation's stock of raw materials essential to the prosecution of a war. Officials said today that orders would be placed in the next twelve months for $10,000,000 worth of such materials. They expected this Congress to appropriate that sum as a start toward accumulating a $100,000,000 store of "strategic" and "critical" minerals and other supplies, mostly produced abroad.

The reserve, a phase of the current reinforcement of land, sea and air defenses, was authorized in a bill which President Roosevelt signed last week to lessen and prevent a "dangerous and costly dependence" upon foreign nations.

Under the heading, "It is a betrayal," the left-wing Reynold's weekly commented: "Is Lord Halifax's offer to discuss colonial problems with dictators an honest attempt to dispel from German minds the threat of encirclement or a dishonest return to the policy of appeasement?"

Move Called Ill-Timed "Certain it is ill-timed. It will raise in Russia as well as in this country doubts as to whether Great Britain is single-minded in rebuilding a peace front in Europe."

"It will set in motion a train of evil speculation on the possibilities of reviving Mr. Chamberlain's discredited policy of doing a deal with dictators at the expense of other nations."

The Sunday pictorial observed that "the Prime Minister is convinced—even now—that soothing words and promises of economic benefits will draw Hitler and Mussolini to a conference table and he is determined to go all out for appeasement with Germany."

Captain John Smuts Dies at Age 66

Boston, June 11 (AP)—Captain John Smuts, 66, widower of May Yohe, who at one time owned the renowned but luckless Hope diamond, and nephew of the famed British South African General, Jan C. Smuts, died suddenly today of a heart attack.

A veteran of the Boer and World wars, Captain Smuts had lived in virtual obscurity since scattering the ashes of his actress wife upon the Atlantic ocean last Sept. 3 in accordance with her dying wish, made a few days earlier.

Wall Street's Investment Machine Shows Signs of Hitting Stride

Revival of New Financing Is Encouraging to Traders

By Frederick Gardner

New York, June 11 (AP)—Wall Street's investment machinery has begun to move again in a renewed effort by private bankers to bridge the gap between idle money and idle men.

A revival in new financing for corporate and municipal account, to many Wall street observers, was the most striking development last week of a somewhat improved business picture.

Municipal and corporate notations for a seven-day period ended Thursday totaled $223,000,000, the largest for any similar period since February, 1937. Several additions to the SEC registry list raised the amount of corporate loans in sight for public offerings in the next few weeks to more than $165,000,000.

Bond men welcomed this resumption of financing after several months of inactivity but were reluctant to label it a real recovery in private investment until they get better insight into how far it may go. On previous occasions the last few years, notably in 1936 and early 1937, there have been worthwhile starts toward revival of private investment, only to be cut short before much headway was made in utilizing stagnant capital.

Unprecedented low money rates and record idle funds in banks and other institutions, it was pointed out, are exerting powerful force for resumption of new financing. This situation has been reflected in a rise in prices on U. S. treasury loans until the average yield on long-term issues has fallen close to 2 per cent.

Steel and automobile industries, on the front-line of capital goods, led the way in further rise in industrial barometers last week but much room remained for further improvement, analysts reminded.

Steel makers, regaining most of the spring loss accompanying the recent war scare and the soft coal mining stoppage, boosted operating schedules to 54.2 per cent of capacity, the highest in two months.

Automobile output doubled as assemblies were stepped up after the Memorial Day interruption and the ending of the strike in the Briggs body plants at Detroit.

The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity, following six months of slow decline, extended its late spring rise. It advanced to 84.5 compared with a mid-way low of 81.8.

Stocks followed the business barometers on a slow upswing but dealings remained quiet.

Spain Continues Roundup Of Republican Culprits

Madrid, June 11 (AP)—Civil guards today seized 150 persons in Toledo on charges of assassinations, looting, robberies and denunciations of nationalists when Toledo province was in Republican hands during the civil war.

The government also completed establishment of nation-wide tribunals to try persons accused of contributing to prolongation of the civil war.

Charge Chinese with Attempt to Poison Japanese Officials

Shanghai, June 11 (AP)—Japanese reported tonight 20 high Japanese and Chinese officials of the Nan-king reformed government were ill in the former Chinese capital from drinking wine allegedly poisoned in a daring attempt of Chinese enemies of the new regime at wholesale killing of the officialdom.

They asserted the attempt occurred last night at the Japanese consulate when Japanese officials entertained Tamesaburo Shimizu, parliamentary vice minister of foreign affairs in Tokyo, at a banquet.

The wine was reported to have brought a speedy end to what had been planned as a gala evening. Japanese reports from Tientsin meanwhile said "a tense calm before the storm" prevailed in the north China port where the British concession has been threatened with isolation unless four Chinese there were surrendered to the Japanese.

The four are suspected by the Japanese of slaying S. G. Cheng, official of the Japanese-dominated customs at the port.

Japanese said "the isolating process" was due to start "in a few days" but so far there has been no effort to carry out a reported 48-hour ultimatum which expired last Saturday for turning over the Chinese refugees.

Helen Keller To Talk At Lions' Convention

Beckley, W. Va., June 11 (AP)—Delegates from 43 state Lions clubs will open a 17th district convention Thursday with an address booked by a woman whose blindness brought fame.

Helen Keller, Long Island, N. Y., author now nearing her 59th birthday, will address the clubmen on the second day of the meeting.

Officials said Miss Keller's appearance would emphasize a major club program — aid to the blind. Miss Keller will not be able to hear her own talk. The illness which left her blind at 10 also made her deaf.

She was born in Alabama, is a college graduate and has lectured in many countries.

Approximately 350 delegates are expected for the convention, to end Saturday.

Nine Year Old Boy Rescues Three Men

Youngstown, O., June 11 (AP)—Nine-year-old Donald Booth today rescued three men from drowning in nearby Lake Milton but was unable to save a fourth, S. F. Cholar, 49, of Lisbon, O., who drowned.

Attracted by the men's shouts the boy guided an outboard motorboat to the spot where they were struggling near their overturned boat. He assisted the three into his craft but did not arrive in time to reach Cholar.

New Double Lines Mean Real Danger

Charleston, W. Va., June 11 (AP)—Those new double lines of white on the highway mean danger—and officials spell it with the capital "D." Said Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson:

"The double lines are used to designate 'no passing zones' and their use will be confined to locations at which it is dangerous to pass the vehicle ahead."

That means "unusual" danger, said Simpson—and that's the law.

Towson, Md., June 11 (AP)—The problems of little Johnny's behavior at home and at school will be threshed out over the council table at the annual State Parent-Teacher conference June 19-21.

Executives of the state school system will speak daily on "our schools," covering grade and high schools and the State Teacher Colleges. State executives of the PTA will discuss the mechanics of the councils, the PTA's legislative program, and cooperation in child health activities.

Delegates will register at the teacher college here and will be greeted by Mrs. Homer V. Hart of Annapolis, state president. Mrs. Robert G. Doty of Cumberland will report on the Congress's publications and Mrs. Milton D. Moore of Hagerstown will discuss establishment of programs. Dr. M. Theresa Weidfeld, president of the college, will talk on its place in the educational picture.

Thomas G. Pullen, administration assistant to the superintendent of schools, will speak on "our schools" the second day. Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins of Washington, a former executive of the National PTA, will follow with a discussion of the national work of the group. S. Denmead Kolb of Salisbury, second vice-president, will summarize the results of the legislative program.

Prosecutor Seeks More Indictments in Phila. Insurance Murders

Philadelphia, June 11 (AP)—Prosecuting Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt said tonight 24 new indictments would be sought this week in Philadelphia's insurance murder case, but that he plans no further trials until September.

"For one thing, it's too hot now for trials," he said. "For another, we have too much work to do."

The June grand jury will be asked to return general conspiracy indictments in a move McDevitt said he hoped would build up a comprehensive picture of the intricate and far-reaching connections between the major and minor figures in the mass slay-for-pay scheme that cost scores of lives in several states.

The new indictments will be pointed at eleven of approximately two dozen persons arrested in the case. All have been arraigned. Some already are under indictment on various charges.

In the first two cases to come to trial, one defendant was convicted with a mandatory death sentence and the other made a court room confession.

Ruth Marie Rubens Is Missing Again

Moscow, June 11 (AP)—Ruth Marie Rubens, the mysterious American who vanished in December, 1937, only to turn up later in a Soviet Russian prison, has disappeared again.

The presiding judge of a Soviet court last Friday told her in the presence of a dozen foreign correspondents and two United States embassy representatives that she would be set free yesterday—having served an 18-month prison sentence for entering Russia without a passport.

Therefore she presumably was released yesterday. Since Friday, however, both Soviet authorities and the United States embassy have professed to have no information concerning her whereabouts.

One unconfirmed report circulated that she was placed aboard a train bound for the western border today. There had been reports that she might go to the United States to appear in connection with a government investigation of alleged passport frauds in New York.

Six Killed, 50 Injured as Storm Sweeps through Six Midwest States

Property Damage Will Run into Hundreds of Thousands

Indianapolis, June 11 (AP)—Indiana counted today three dead and Ohio two and Wisconsin one, in the wake of a June storm which slashed through six western states injuring more than fifty persons and causing hundreds of thousands of dollars in property damage.

The high wind, rain and lightning swept across this state, and parts of Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Kentucky last night. Houses were destroyed, utility services disrupted and hundreds of trees were blown down.

Indiana's dead:

Child Dies in Wreck Martel Briles, 8, killed near Swayzee when an automobile carrying 10 persons through the rain ran into a tree felled across a road.

Gerald W. Brown, 26, crushed to death at Schneider as an implement supply house was blown down. Charles Weiss, 59, farmer, injured fatally near Logansport when a truck traveling through a heavy rain knocked him from his bicycle.

A Beloit, Wis., baby died when her jugular vein was cut by glass as a small garage was blown against a house.

Mrs. Harry Metz was killed on a Hicksville, O., street when the wind blew a tree across the automobile in which she was riding. Numerous buildings were unroofed in this town and other communities in the section. George W. Dougherty, 42, of Elyria, O., drowned when his fishing boat capsized as the storm churned Lake Erie.

Coast Guards Rescue 50

Coast guards rescued at least 50 persons from boats and breakwaters in the Lorain-Cleveland district marooned along the lake.

Jacksonville was hit hardest in Illinois. More than 20 homes were damaged at an estimated loss of $100,000. More than an inch of rain fell in Chicago, Louisville and Indianapolis.

Utilities were crippled and buildings damaged at Adrain and other Southern Michigan cities.

Many sections of Louisville and surrounding communities were without electric service as the storm hit there.

Two Persons Drown In Baltimore Area

Baltimore, June 11 (AP)—Two persons were drowned today as high temperatures and humidity combined to drive holiday crowds to the water.

One of the victims was Thelma Hopkins, 16, drowned while rescuing Thelma Brady, 14. The girls were bathing when the younger one waded over her depth. Miss Hopkins dragged the screaming girl into shallow water and bystanders brought her to shore. Meanwhile, Miss Hopkins had disappeared. By the time her body was recovered, she was dead.

The other victim was Mrs. Lerene Treman, 25, who was thrown into the Patuxent river with four companions when a sailboat overturned near the city airport.

Mrs. Treman sank after her companions got her to within 75 feet of shore. Her husband, S. Michael Treman, was taken from the water by a Pan-American Airways launch which was awaiting the arrival of the Bermuda Clipper.

One Baker Killed Partner Threatend

Moorhead, Minn., June 11 (AP)—A telephone call from a mysterious source that ordered her to tell her husband "he's next" was received by Mrs. John Knutson, wife of a co-owner of the Northwest bakery here early today as authorities sought to clear up the bomb-killing of Milton Lee, 28, son of the other partner in the bakery.

Mrs. Knutson reported to authorities that the unidentified caller first asked for her husband, and when told that he was not at home, ordered her to "tell your husband he's next." The caller then hung up and efforts to trace the call were fruitless.

Meanwhile, County Attorney James A. Garrity of Clay county, said Roland Tougas, Fargo, N. D., bakery union president, still was held in the Moorhead city jail for questioning in connection with the death of Lee. Garrity said Tougas admitted having telephoned John Lee, the slain youth's father, that the union would circulate the town that the Northwest bakery was unfair to organized labor, but denied making any threats.

King and Queen Eat Hot Dogs and Drink Beer at Hyde Park

They took their first dip Friday afternoon at the White House after an informal tea.

The Roosevelts and the Windsors started their informal day in worship together in the plain pews of tiny St. James Episcopal church, nestled in the trees two miles from the Roosevelt estate.

Decorous but excited communicants looked on as Mr. Roosevelt moved into a front row pew of plain walnut. With him in the pew were the King, Queen Elizabeth, Mrs. Roosevelt and the president's 84-year-old mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt.

In solemn reverence, the royal couple followed the services, joining in the singing of hymns and the responsive readings. The King moved his hand to his forehead during several prayers.

King Heads Church

King George is the head of the Anglican church and "defender of the faith." Mr. Roosevelt is a senior warden of St. James Parish.

Except for special prayers and a brief word of greeting to the royal visitors, the services followed the usual Episcopal morning prayer routine.

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church preached the sermon, in which he asserted that the nations represented at this service must share a large part of the responsibility for solving the nations' ills.

The rector, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, a tall spare man with a thin voice, eased some of the tension among the communicants when he noted that every seat was filled and interspersed a welcome to the royal couple.

"One sees what happens when our parishioners bring their guests to the church," he said. "If every one would do this we would fill the church every Sunday."

Adds King and Queen

"We appreciate the historic visit their majesties are making to this parish," he added, looking directly at the king and queen. "We are happy to add our voice to that of the mother (Anglican) church in commending your majesties to the grace and protection of Almighty God."

The royal visitors and their hosts drove to the church from the Roosevelt family home where their majesties were belated guests at an informal dinner party last night after a tumultuous welcome earlier in New York City.

The king and queen retired about midnight and slept late this morning.

After the services in the old gray church set in a grove of lofty pines and maples, the party returned to the Roosevelt ancestral estate to change clothes suitable for a picnic lunch at the president's Dutchess Hill cottage, three miles through the woodlands from the main house.

Sing British Anthem

At the church entrance, parishioners who could not get inside—and thousands of others striving for a glimpse of the royal visitors—applauded briskly. A small group of women sang spontaneously the British national anthem.

Queen Elizabeth wore a hyacinth crepe, street-length dress with matching halo hat, purse, gloves and shoes and a white gardenia held to her left shoulder by a leaf-shaped diamond clasp.

The president's wife wore a silk chiffon dress in a print designed by her niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, II. A tucked blouse was divided from the skirt by a belt of royal blue, her wide-brimmed hat and purse were the same shade. She carried white gloves.

In the car with the first ladies of the two lands was the president's mother, wearing a black chiffon dress with white roses and a black turban.

MacKenzie King Present

Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada rode along to church as did the president's "eldest son, James, with Betsy, his wife, and Sara, his eight-year-old daughter.

In a group confessional, the king and queen, president and Mrs. Roosevelt, joined in the words: "let us humbly confess our sins before Almighty God." Bishop Tucker gave absolution.

Prayers were given for peace and grace and there was a special prayer for "Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary and Princess Elizabeth," with Mr. Wilson asking God to "give them grace and happiness and bring them to Thy kingdom."

In the sermon Bishop Tucker asserted that "we can love our neighbors as ourselves only when we make the definition of neighbor all-inclusive."

"But sometimes," he added, "our interests in our own country have led to extreme nationalism, race prejudice and sectarian persecution."

Arthur Degroff, a vestryman, proprietor of a bus line and manager of the Hyde Park baseball team, passed a silver collection plate to the president and his royal guests. Although the king ordinarily does not carry money, he dropped in some folded bills—American money.

Two Killed in Plane Accident

Kenosha, Wis., June 11 (AP)—A pilot flying a borrowed monoplane and his passenger were killed today when the plane crashed near the Kenosha country club, seven miles north of the city.

The pilot was Magnus Jacobson, 35, of Racine, and the passenger was identified as Richard D. Kilder, 19, of Racine, who returned yesterday after graduating from the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Theodore Sokow, a Kenosha physician, and his son John, playing golf, witnessed the crash.

Pershing Not Ill He Says in Paris

Paris, June 11 (AP)—General John J. Pershing, 78-year-old A. E. F. commander in the world war, went for a drive in Paris today after spending several days in bed resting from his trip from the United States.

Associates earlier had said he suffered a heart attack yesterday but the general scorned these reports with the statement: "Me ill? It's ridiculous!"

Pershing, who came to France last week as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, said he had been tired out by his trip—his 71st Atlantic voyage—and had stayed in bed several days resting.

He said his condition was good and there was no cause for alarm. Later, striding briskly through his hotel lobby, he went for an automobile drive.

Gets Wooden Leg Caught in Wreck

Seattle, June 11 (AP)—Piteous cries of Anton Sather, 70, begging them to hurry spurred rescuers as they frantically tried to free his leg from wreckage of his automobile after it had been struck by a train.

"Please hurry," Sather urged. But when the ambulance arrived, Sather said calmly:

"You won't need that. It was my wooden leg that was caught. 'Then what was your hurry?' a perspiring rescuer demanded. "I didn't want to be late to work."

And to work he went, after having minor cuts treated. Not even the wooden leg was damaged seriously.

Senators Threaten To Prolong Session Until Mid-August

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Senate opponents of neutrality law revision claimed today to have the support of at least 24 senators and said they would serve notice on the administration that if it insisted on repeal of the arms embargo they would be a fight certain to prolong the session at least until mid-August.

A member of the group said the word would be carried to President Roosevelt early this week by a senator who thus far has taken no active part in the neutrality controversy. The chief executive is due to return tomorrow night from his trip to Hyde Park and West Point, N. Y.

Roosevelt Checking Senate There were indications, meantime, that the administration was conducting its own private check on Senate sentiment on the proposal. Secretary of State Hull, that the arms embargo be discarded in favor of a system of presidential control of wartime shipping.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Senate Democratic chieftain, said, however, that he thought Congressional leaders would have little more information to give the president Tuesday about a prospective adjournment date than last week when they were understood to have told him in effect that all legislative action except neutrality could be cleaned up by July 15.

Both Senate and House foreign committees may consider neutrality legislation this week.

Discuss King's Visit

There was some discussion of senatorial circles of the possible effect of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth on the neutrality controversy. Opponents had said that the Hull proposals would be of direct benefit to England, in event of war in Europe, because the control of the seas likely would enable her to obtain munitions here while cutting off the shipping of her opponent.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.), member of the Foreign Relations committee, said he believed the visit had "softened" some of the congressional criticism of Great Britain's policies.

On the other hand, Senator Borah (R-Idaho), who has been a consistent critic of Great Britain's course, indicated clearly that his ideas had not been changed by his contact with the sovereigns of the nation.

Congress To Slow Speed

With neutrality apparently the only issue threatening major congressional controversy, Congress will hasten this week to clear its docket of other legislation.

The Senate Finance Committee is to take up tomorrow, with Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security board as its first witness, amendments to the social security act which were approved by the House yesterday.

These amendments provide for starting old age payments next year instead of in 1942, and for increasing payments in the early years of the act's operation. In addition, coverage would be extended to new groups of workers.

James H. Pugh Named To State Commission

Annapolis, Md., June 11 (AP)—James H. Pugh, former state's attorney for Montgomery county, was appointed a member of the State Industrial Accident Commission today by Governor O'Connor.

He will succeed Omar D. Crothers, Democrat, whose term had expired. Pugh, a resident of Chevy Chase, will serve five years in the $5,000-a-year post.

He has maintained a law practice in Rockville and formerly was affiliated with a real estate firm in Washington, D. C.

Wings of Youth

By HELEN WELSHIMER

SYNOPSIS
SARAH ANNE MELTON, minister's daughter and close friend of JUDITH DRAKE, daughter of luxury, had a childhood romance with JACK COURTNEY, who attains sudden fame by flying the Pacific.

YESTERDAY: Sarah Anne sees a plane crash at the airport. Out of the wreckage tumbles Bob Kennedy with a broken leg. At the hospital she learns he is a close friend of Jack's.

CHAPTER EIGHT

SITTING AT the parsonage dining room table, eating big red strawberries from dark blue bowls, Sarah Anne and Judith and Jack might have been the three sympathetic people who had gone to the raft the night before.

But Sarah Anne knew they were not. Something had happened to day. Something had happened to these two who zoomed away in that ship this morning for a brief day that had turned out to be a long day.

Now she smiled at Jack as she waited for his news, not even remembering how troubled and mused her frock and hair were, not caring that Judith wore a yellow suit with a saucy brown turban and wide brown belt studded with gold nail heads.

"Lady, I hereby announce that I take charge of the local flying field," Jack said with mock ceremony. "Besides, I shall become the head of a small school in aeronautics about to be opened in your fair city. The plans went through today."

Not for worlds would Sarah Anne have said the next words had she been less tired, less troubled. She wanted to reach out, take them from the air, destroy them once they were said: "So Judith knew it first!"

But maybe it was better she said them, she thought later. For no one could have failed to catch the swift look which passed between the two, a look that said: "She knows! But she mustn't know! We won't tell, ever!"

Sarah Anne turned her remark into a jest the next minute, and her voice laughed. "That isn't fair, darling! I don't say prayers for you all the way across the ocean? But it's marvelous. You'll be living right here all of the time!"

"You and I will be living right here all of the time," Jack corrected, and reached for her hand. "It took a long time to get the papers signed—a lot of red tape."

Maybe she was being silly because she was so weary, maybe this pressure of Jack's hand was as real as she wanted it to be, maybe she had better stop using her imagination. Anyway, Jack must know about Bob.

He didn't wait half a minute when he heard the news. His eyes narrowed, he asked a few terse questions, then he was at the door. "What's he like, this Bob?" Judith asked.

"Something like Jack, only—well, he laughs at everything, even shattered legs. Happy-go-lucky, I guess. But I liked him. You will, too. You'll have a long time to get acquainted. You can read to him."

"I don't like to read to people." Her voice was a little annoyed, yet Judith was usually patient. "You take on the job. Besides, I won't be here."

"You're going to the mountains or seashore?" "Funny to be relieved, though. 'Oh, you can't! You have to be my maid of honor. You see, it will be a church wedding because the whole church should come.'"

"It's to be soon?" She looked up brightly. "Maybe I will stay over. No, I'm not going to the shore or mountains. I think it will be Europe."

Sarah Anne asked the next question softly, because she knew the answer before she spoke. "Why, Judy?"

"Because I fell in love with the wrong flying guy, Sally Anne dear. Just my luck, and I think I'll be a nicer person if I go traveling."

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I have been visiting a good many clinics lately, mostly in the eastern part of the country, and feel that some of the things I have seen will be of interest to my readers, so I will describe them.

One of the most astonishing was a clinic on plastic surgery for the repair of disfigured noses and other facial disfigurements. I saw patients, some of them before and after the operation, and the change was almost unbelievable. Large, hooked noses of hideous appearance are turned into straight Greek noses. Large, hypertrophied noses

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

are made to conform to the proper proportions and angles of the face. Plastic surgeons have learned that they must study their patients carefully before operations. This constitutes probably the greatest single advance in their work. They have learned to set up a standard of facial proportions and make careful measurements before the operation to see that the final result will conform to these ideal measurements.

One patient said she hated her mother and sisters because "they are so beautiful and do not realize what I go through."

Regarded as Handicap
With many of these cases for years the scar, harelip or misshapen nose had been looked on as a handicap. Its importance in the social and emotional adjustment is unconsciously all embracing. It is the "hook" on which the patient has hung all inadequacies, all dissatisfactions, all procrastinations, and all unpleasant duties of social life, and he has come to depend on it not only as a reasonable escape from competition but as a protection from social responsibility.

In many cases, because of this attitude of dependency the operation does not lead to a complete mental adjustment and plastic surgeons are beginning to utilize psychiatrists

Joint Meeting Of Civic Clubs

Parsons and Davis Kiwanis Members Will Meet at Davis Tonight

Parsons, W. Va., June 11.—The Worden Hotel at Davis will be the scene of a joint meeting Monday evening of the Parsons Kiwanis Club and the Davis Chamber of Commerce at which time a program will be given in charge of the publicity committee, with Howard Dudley as chairman. The program will consist of talks and songs by Sarah B. Huff, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Plans will be made for a pageant depicting the industrial and pioneer life of Tucker county, which will be held the latter part of August on grounds near Blackwater Falls. This will be the first affair of this sort ever held in this section and visitors from many nearby counties are expected to attend. An elaborate program is to be arranged.

Flanagan Funeral
Funeral services were held today at the home for Elmer F. Flanagan, 14, son of William E. Flanagan, of this city, who was killed while playing in the old abandoned mill building here. A large piece of cement fell and pinned him beneath it.

Pets Are Poisoned
Much criticism is being aroused here over the poisoning of several dozen family pets. Dogs and cats in all parts of the city have been poisoned in the past several days and a number of chickens belonging to F. C. Randolph, graded school principal, also were poisoned by somebody who apparently is traveling all over the city throwing out poison.

Brief Mention
The Queen Esther Circle met at the home of Mrs. Mildred Price where the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Mrs. Frances Cox, president; Miss Ruth Stevens, vice president; Mary Armstrong, secretary; Mrs. Eugene Cullins, treasurer; Mrs. Ernestine Kee, mite box secretary; Ethel M. Loughry, reporter.

The Parsons Woman's Club met in the Sunday school auditorium of the Presbyterian church where a musical program was given in charge of Mr. Elmer Dorsey.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames Stark L. Corberly, D. Ralph Hansford, Elmer Ours and Lucy Long.

Clyde Shaffer, Leadmine, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Tucker County hospital yesterday.

Prof. and Mrs. J. E. Riley and family attended the visit of the King and Queen of England at Washington. They also visited at Annapolis Naval Academy with their son, William.

Increasing Perennials by Propagation

By DEAN HALL DAY
Some perennials and many of the rock garden plants can be propagated this month by means of cuttings after the plants have finished blooming.

When making cuttings of Iberis or Arabis use a piece of new shoot on the old stem, as shown in the Garden-Graph. A sharp knife should be used in making the cuttings so the edge will not be torn or ragged. Many cuttings may be made from each plant. Small cuttings root easier than large ones.

Plant the cutting fairly deep in a mixture of peat and sand. Water the cuttings and keep them shaded for several days by means of paper covers or cloth screens. After the cuttings have developed their own root system they should be transplanted into good garden soil.

WHY SOME SCHOOLING DURING VACATION TIME IS ADVISABLE

Keeping Children Off the Streets

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
During recent years there has grown up throughout the United States the Vacation Bible school. It is a free school for young children of the community, carried on in a church during the summer.

At the Vacation Bible school children receive not only religious and moral instruction, but also engage in a large number of wholesome activities. Group games, craftsmanship and the dramatic arts are emphasized.

As a rule, the teachers at the Vacation Bible school are outstanding personalities, with successful training in day schools and, typically, these teachers unselfishly contribute their time. What a splendid service they render!

Children who attend the Vacation Bible school have occasion to make new friends and to gain more opportunities for good social adaptation. It is a fine place for the timid child as well as the rough-neck.

And there's a wholesome spirit of democracy in this school. Many children gain from it some of the very traits to be gained from attending a summer camp.

Not on Streets
When children are in the Vacation Bible school they are not on the street; they are physically and morally safe. Attendance may help a child to render a day short and interesting which otherwise might be long and boring. Thanks to the Vacation Bible school, many an over-weary mother is relieved of the child's care. If the mother is working, it must give her considerable peace of mind to know her child is in such a safe and wholesome environment while she must be away from home.

Let me suggest to the teachers of this school that just because the ages of her children vary widely she has an excellent opportunity to have older children read to small groups of younger children.

Summer Tutoring
A great many children will be tutored during the summer. The tutor should be a person who knows how a child learns, be able to ascertain his specific learning difficulties and guide him in doing what he can succeed at.

Unfortunately, many a tutor of—say, the child who fails fifth grade reading or arithmetic, will merely have him do more fifth grade reading or arithmetic when he probably should be practiced on the level of the fourth, third or even second grade. The simple principle of setting the learner to do only what he can do well is still very slowly grasped by many a parent and teacher.

I shall be glad to hear from parents or tutors of children who need special help this summer. I might be able to offer a few suggestions on methods and materials, even on self-help and self-teaching materials in reading and arithmetic. Just write me a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Newly planted shrubs and trees should not be allowed to suffer for lack of moisture. It takes some time for a root system to become sufficiently well established to keep the top growth adequately supplied with moisture during hot weather.

A Whale of a Mess

FACED with the urgent necessity of stimulating the flow of investment funds and getting the nation's 11,000,000 unemployed back to work, the New Deal flaps and flounders as helpless as a whale on a beach.

And it is indeed a whale of a mess in which the nation finds itself in consequence of the New Deal's cockeyed squandering policies and its almost incredible incompetence.

Today's basic problem is to activate the vast machine of private enterprise to the end that our millions of unemployed and our billions of idle capital may be put to work together.

Bankrupt of constructive ideas, the New Deal has no solution to offer except the thoroughly discredited policy of spend and tax and elect. It puts all of the emphasis on consumer purchasing power. But to increase that purchasing power it has nothing to propose except more public spending; in other words, to tax one segment of the people that more spending money may be given to another.

The fundamental unsoundness of this theory is that it ignores the plain fact that if consumers are to spend, they must, in any sound economy, earn the money to be spent. Mere spending cannot be emphasized and the importance of earning ignored. Earnings come from production. Production creates wealth. No new wealth is created by mere consumer spending of money which has its source in non-productive taxation or public borrowing. And as a spur to business recovery it is ineffective, since the drag on the one side offsets the stimulus on the other.

This is just plain, ordinary common sense. Every man who is not an imbecile knows that if he spends more than he has earned he will ultimately have to pay the difference. Or the other fellow will have to pay it. That is what the president ought to call "plain arithmetic." It is not a theory evolved by experts he is pleased to dub "high-gear economists."

Nothing could be simpler or more elementary. Yet the president said to the retailers the other night: "You cannot expect this administration to alter the principles and objectives for which it has struggled in the last six years."

The Eighty-Hour Week for Executives

TIME WAS when an executive, if he was a good organizer, could leave all minor decisions to his subordinates. He might get away for golf one afternoon a week and go home to his family circle in the evening much as his employees did.

But the rules are all changed now. Business is trussed up by so many new laws and regulations that the executive must pass on everything or find his company either in the frying pan or the fire. A foreman is afraid to fire a man for insubordination without asking the superintendent. They both wind up in the head office discussing possible repercussions from the N.L.R.B. The gifted advertising manager wonders if under the Wheeler-Lea Act he could state in an advertisement that "Lizzie Brownham's Asparagus Compound grows hair on the chest and restores virility." He decided he had better put it up to the Boss.

About this time the sales manager has a problem. If he registers under the Fair Trade Act in Arkansas where will that leave the company with regard to the anti-trust law? Too big a problem to pass on himself, so he makes a date to meet the company attorney at the general manager's office.

Mr. Boss used to be a planner and a creator, writes Arthur Walsh in Nation's Business. "Now he must, in fairness to his stockholders, be a monitor first and a guiding genius next. So much of his time is taken up in a judiciary capacity that he is lucky indeed if he can make any contribution to his company in a leadership capacity."

Not Good for the Country

DECISION by Homer Martin's automobile workers union to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor will not add to the prospects of peace between Mr. Green's national body and Mr. Lewis's CIO.

It may also be doubted that it will relieve the automobile industry from labor stresses and strains. Likewise it may present to the National Labor Relations Board some additional problems which it might well pray it be spared. It does apparently give to the Martin organization the backing of the older national organization of unionized labor, whatever that may be worth to it.

As a means, however, of lessening danger of union competition within big industry, it can hardly be said that this latest realignment is anything to be desired. Industry suffers as an innocent third party when it becomes the victim of jurisdictional disputes between labor leaders. The intensity of the break between the Lewis and Green forces is now augmented by the bitterness which has marked the break between Lewis and Martin.

These things are not good for the country, they are not good for either industry or labor. They are created solely to serve the ambitions of individuals.

Where Have We Been?

PERHAPS the most disconcerting figures to Americans contained in the data published by the League of Nations are those concerned with industrial production in the nations of the world. They show that the United States stands seventeenth—far below all others—in the recovery of industrial production.

The League of Nations report sets 1929 as a normal year and then reveals that as of 1938 the United States produces industrially but 72.3 per cent of what it did in 1929. France and Belgium are the only two countries which make nearly as bad a showing with 76.9 per cent and 75.1 per cent respectively. In addition, only the Netherlands, Canada and Italy remain below the 1929 level, Italy showing 98.6 per cent recovery; Canada showing 90.0 per cent recovery and the Netherlands 89.8 per cent. On a rising scale the other nations range from the United Kingdom with 115.7 per cent recovery to Latvia with 174.5 per cent recovery in industrial production.

Japan is listed as slightly better than 170 per cent. Finland shows 152.5 per cent recovery; Sweden 146.0 per cent; Estonia 145.5 per cent; Chile 136.8 per cent; Denmark 135.0 per cent; Norway 127.2 per cent; Germany 126.2 per cent, and Poland 117.3 per cent.

Perhaps the most significant of all of the comparisons is that between the volumes of production in Canada and those in this country. Canada suffered from the impact of the great depression as severely as did the United States, and in some respects she was even harder hit, but during the recovery years she has steadily managed to have less relative unemployment and larger increases of production than this country, and she has done so with smaller proportional increases in her public debt.

The New Deal cry has been "on toward recovery." The slogan is excellent but the performance has fallen far short of the ideals of a vibrant America.

Bits of Wisdom

A CLIPPING comes to hand that makes good reading. The News is not sure, but it seems to have been taken from the old Youth's Companion, the famous Boston weekly that entertained and inspired the elders of today when they were youngsters. It is a short collection of apothegms:

"Do not begin a job with a hurrah and finish it with an excuse.

"Look before or, as Poor Richard warns us, you will find yourself behind.

"Perhaps you have observed that the man who has a long head seldom has a long tongue.

"It is a great deal easier to find an engine than it is to find an engineer.

"Of every hundred men called failures, ninety-seven have been lukewarm in their work.

"The success secret of any captain of the world's progress: He did more than was expected of him.

"Following the line of least resistance is what makes rivers and men crooked.

"You need never fear the man who tells you to go to perdition.

"It does not look well to see the children wearing all the good clothes in the family. It is not necessary to furnish security in order to borrow trouble.

"By all means sympathize with the under dog, but before you give your sympathy see that he is not a wolf..."

Good bits of practical wisdom, these. They may suggest some remedies and reformations needed on the part of those who read them, for which reason they are here passed along.

Now they've discovered a bug which hops forward, backward and sidewise with equal speed. Imagine an insect with all the qualities of an international statesman.

A critic says there are loopholes in the tax structure because those who draw laws are all thumbs. With none of them in the dike.

Folks who are always boasting that they do not know their own strength forget that that's their real weakness.

I Could Be Perfect, but---

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I know a lot about raising children perfectly. . . I have read dozens of books on the subject. I have done much thinking about it. I used to get rather good "marks" in school, so at least I have a good memory, regardless of what you may think of my intelligence.

So I know about children. . . I used to be one of them and I think I remember what it was like.

I know what they should eat. I know how much sleep they should have. I know how they should be treated.

I have a fairly accurate idea of what goes on in their minds and what they think of grownups. (It isn't flattering.)

I know that what they say should be heard respectfully and that they should be treated with consideration.

I know that children like to know where they stand; they like a "no" to mean "no" and a "yes" to mean "yes."

I know that parents shouldn't fuss and nag. They should treat their children like intelligent human beings.

They should not let small irritations trouble them.

They should keep their promises.

Their homes should be quietly and restful and really HOME for the young people, where the truth can always be told and where the child will be happy and at ease.

In fact, I know a lot about what a parent should be and I know a lot more than I have set down here. If I tried to write all I know about raising children it would fill a fat book and people would write me for advice and I would be a recognized expert on the subject.

BUT—

But my knowledge is far greater than my capacity to perform. I know a lot, but I don't do a lot. I could be perfect, but you can ask any of my children if I am. . . And I'd rather not be there when they answer.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

On July 3, 1874, the Philadelphia Public Ledger printed, obscurely, the following notice:

"Lost, on the 1st instant, a small boy, about four years of age; light complexion and curly hair. A suitable reward will be paid for his return to E. L. Joyce, Central Station, corner of Fifth and Chestnut Streets."

Today, in Phoenix, Arizona, there is a 69-year-old carpenter known as Gustave Blair, who says he is that missing Person—the kidnapped Charley Ross whose story has run through two generations and still remains a baffling mystery after all these years, still a classic in crime even in modern times and with far more recent "snatches" of dramatic and tragic sequel.

An Arizona judge accepts Mr. Blair's claim and rules that he is the missing Charley Ross. However, it was rather a perfunctory judgment in default, as the relatives of Charley Ross sued for recognition of Mr. Blair's family status, did not appear. No money was demanded. Mr. Blair sought legal identification merely to allow him to be remarried in Germantown, Pa., the home of Charley Ross, on July 1, under his own name. The ruling of the judge received only casual attention in the newspapers. Not that interest in this news perennial will ever fade. It is merely that there have been so many Charley Rosses that one more or less doesn't seem to matter.

Great Stir at First
The late Captain Ayres, of the New York Bureau of Missing Persons, used to remark on a dull day, "Well, it's about time for somebody to drop in and say he is Charley Ross." When the first of these self-identifiers appeared in the person of William Van Hodge of Galveston, there was a great stir in the papers. Mr. Van Hodge had some rather impressive evidence, but somehow it trailed on out of the back pages and was forgotten.

Then came Charles Burton Ross, of Cleveland; W. R. Coleman and Charles Burton Ross, of New York; Julius Dellinger, of Denver; L. D. Bond, of Dayton; Daniel Peters, of Livingston, N. Y.; Walter Brownston, dying on Welfare Island still declaring, with his dying breath, that he was Charley Ross—these and countless others on down through the years.

A curious detail of singular record is the fact that all of these claimants were apparently honest, hard-working persons, as is this Arizona carpenter, apparently absolutely convinced of the truth of their claims. None was unbalanced. In no case was hope of money involved. Several offered what appeared superficially to be convincing proof.

America's First

This was America's first notorious kidnapping. They used chalk plates in the newspaper then, for it was before the days of the "zincs" and photo-engraving. Compared to present time, their resources and facilities were meagre in publicizing and sensationalizing the kidnapping of the tiny lad with the yellow curls, but they made the most of what they had. And they certainly had the ingredients of a big story—all the more of a sensation because of its novelty, in the days before kidnapping had become an established industry.

Christian K. Ross was a well-to-do Philadelphia dry-goods jobber. Baby Charley and his brother Walter, aged 6, were playing on the lawn in front of the family's imposing Currier and Ives residence in Germantown. Two unkempt-looking fellows drove up in a shabby buggy, lured the boy into the rig, drove off and gave Walter a quarter to buy candy. When the lad came out from the candy store, the buggy with the two men and his brother had disappeared.

On July 4, the father received a letter which said that Charley was being held for a ransom of $20,000. And there was this warning:

"Any approach to his hiding place will be made the signal

LONDON "TARGET"

Mona Friedlander (above), 24-year-old daughter of a British millionaire banker, does her bit for dear old Albion by flying over London almost every night as a target for the city's anti-aircraft defenses. for his instant annihilation. Will write later."

Less Callous Than

Reading the stories of the country's rage and horror at this date, one would think that we must have been much more sensitive, much less callous than we seem to be now in the face of cumulative horrors. The whole nation turned out on a man hunt. A rendezvous was made with the kidnapers at a New York hotel, with the ransom money ready, but they did not keep their appointment.

It was years before the excitement and the activities of volunteer detectives began to die down. Newspapers fought a pest of clairvoyants, people who had seen Charley Ross in a vision, spiritualists bringing in town ghostly tribes of Indians who brought word that the lad had been adopted into a far-western Indian tribe. Mothers wept all over the country as a national detective agency scattered thousands of photographs throughout the land.

"The Amalgamated Friends of Charley Ross" became a nationally organized society. Nobody could say the newspapers were pumping this up. It was merely a manifestation of spontaneous public feeling. Kidnaping was then and is now a tremendous moving story, one which stirs the fires of anger and tugs at the heartstrings of pity—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Recreational Wonderland

From the West Virginia Review.

West Virginia has become known throughout the nation as a recreational wonderland of mountain and valley, forest and stream—the fulfilled dream of the tourist.

Today splendid highways wind through valleys and forests and around mountains, opening up ever-changing panoramas of loveliness. New routes have been finished through the state and national forests, past mountain streams—into a vacation land which appeals to the nature-lover, the artist, the sportsman or just plain motorist.

All of these things West Virginia has to offer for the gratification of tourists and those who seek healthful outdoor recreation. We have publicized these attractions and each season shows an increase in the number of tourists who respond to our invitation to come to West Virginia. In fact, the number of tourists who annually come to our state is larger than those for whom we can furnish first-class accommodations. This will be true, we believe, even during the coming season. More modernly equipped tourist camps are needed. Many present camps and other facilities need to be brought up to date to meet the demands that will be made on them.

This need, we are sure, will be given deep consideration by those persons who officially represent the state in its program designed to attract more visitors to West Virginia. It might well receive the attention, also, of those who wish to invest wisely for profit to themselves.

Cul de Sac for New Dealers
But suppose the outcome were the other way—suppose Mr. Garner won the nomination. What would the New Dealers do? Most of the New Dealers—those who are Democrats first and New Dealers afterward—would support Mr. Garner. But what course would be open to the extreme New Dealers? Specifically, for example, what would Mr. Thomas Corcoran do, or Mr. Harry Hopkins? Or the body of extreme Deal voters who are symbol-

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, June 11—Looking toward the Democratic presidential nomination, there are two major movements.

A member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, Mr. Harold Ickes, has said publicly and forcefully that the president ought to have a third term. And friends of Vice-President Garner have said positively that his name will go before the convention. These two movements are major. Mr. Roosevelt is the symbol of the New Deal wing of the party in power. Mr. Garner is the symbol of the orthodox Democratic wing.

Besides these, there are minor movements. A formal movement for ex-Governor McNutt of Indiana has been under way for some time. In various states the local Democratic organization is preparing to send delegates to the convention instructed for some local Democratic leader, a senator or a governor, as a "favorite son." But all these smaller movements are for the present comparatively negligible. Whether any of these minor movements ever amounts to anything is dependent on the outcome of the big-rig battle between the New Dealers symbolized by Mr. Roosevelt, and the orthodox Democrats symbolized by Mr. Garner.

As It Now Stands

Let us discuss this major battle as if it went on to the end in the form in which it now is—that is, with Mr. Roosevelt contending for the nomination as head of the New Deal wing of the party, Mr. Garner contending as head of the orthodox Democratic wing. Let us assume that a year from today, on the eve of the Democratic national convention, the situation has narrowed down to a clear-cut, simple political duel between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner.

In such a situation, who would be the better candidate for the Democrats to nominate? By "better candidate" is meant the one who, in the general election against the Republican nominee, would get the larger vote. Which, as between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner, would make the better campaign against the Republicans?

To answer this question we must consider what would be the course of the followers of the defeated candidate? For example, suppose Mr. Roosevelt wins. In that event, what would the followers of the defeated Mr. Garner do? Most of them no doubt would vote the regular ticket, for Mr. Roosevelt. But there would be an aggrieved group, made up of strongly conservative Democrats, who would bitterly dislike to support Mr. Roosevelt. To such, there would be a place to go. They could vote the Republican ticket and satisfy their conservatism.

While he was in the Soviet capital, says White, a visit was paid there by Herbert Benjamin, secretary-treasurer of the Workers' Alliance, who is alleged to have spent all his time in Moscow planning the march on the Capitol at Washington.

Benjamin, an admitted member of the Communist party, had previously told the committee that his visit to Moscow was paid for by the Alliance, which is supported by dues from WPA workers, who in

Semantics Gets An Explanation

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., June 11—Mr. Arthur Krock seems to have dug up for the New York Times a document saying in print what has long been well-known and accepted fact in Washington—that Fourth New Dealers and even witnesses before investigating committees are being coached in a new language, or at least a new vocabulary. Its theory does not deny that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet but it goes much further than the principle that no good peddler should use a street-vary "rotten fish for sale."

So somebody, probably Stuart Chase, has produced a deodorizing memorandum. You don't call drunken-sailor governmental extravagance "spending." You call it "investing." You refer to unbearable debts as valuable investment. If you get up a phony budget, you don't call it a "double-entry" budget. You call it a budget on a "business basis." This art is called "semantics."

It is a good thing Arthur has the evidence on this "semantic" business. On two or three other recent occasions when he reported things pretty well known in Washington, but not reduced to writing, he was flatly contradicted on authority so high that it was simply not seemly to continue the argument. The contradictions were probably "semantic." Mr. Krock is very careful and he has excellent associates. They usually check every assertion about three ways. This time that won't be necessary.

In "Huckleberry Finn"

Mr. Chase, however, did not invent "semantics." They began in the Garden of Eden when the serpent told Eve that forbidden fruit would "make her wise." The whole of history and literature abounds in "semantics." The commonest type is that taught to Huckleberry Finn by his old Pap—the town bum. Pap said it is all right to snatch other people's things—a shirt from the clothes lines, a chicken from the coop or a watermelon from the patch—if you only say to yourself: "Some day I'll return this." Without that it would be stealing, but with that it is only borrowing. So Huck and Jim "semantically" "borrowed" their way down most of the Mississippi River.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford was a master of "semantics" and so were all of O. Henry's gentle grafter. A horse trader who, when asked to sell him a good eyed, told his dupes: "She can see as well at night as she can in the daytime." That guy was a perfect "semanticist."

It was good "semantics" when the Allies grabbed all the German colonies and called it "accepting a mandate." Mr. Musica was using "semantics" when he called his empty Canadian drug warehouses "assets." That was exactly the same kind of "semantics" that is involved in called spending "investing" and debts "investments." A gold brick is "semantics" for value and so is counterfeit money.

Mean the Same Thing

Of course, they are degrees of semanticism all the way from perfectly innocent softening of ugly words for ugly facts, like saying that a person "passed on" when you mean "died," or that a man smells when you really mean that he stinks and you smell him. There is no harm in this because both words mean exactly the same thing to the hearer. He is not fooled and the speaker is not trying to fool him. Especially is there no attempt to fool him to his disadvantage.

But a "semantic" who attempts to beguile a listener into believing that something he is offering him will do him good when it will grievously harm him—even if it is technically a lie or actionably a fraud—is certainly no much idealism as we are constantly taught by Fourth New Dealers to expect from the Fourth New Deal. Maybe that use of "idealism" is also "semantic." —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

All this is very interesting. It is especially interesting since, while White was testifying, the Workers' Alliance was holding a convention in Washington, the cost of which is also, no doubt, indirectly paid by Uncle Sam. Most interesting of all is the fact that Attorney General Murphy and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt appear on the Alliance convention program as speakers.

We submit this data with a question: Can you conceive of such shenanigans on at any previous time in the history of the Republic?

The Eighty-Hour Week for Executives

TIME WAS when an executive, if he was a good organizer, could leave all minor decisions to his subordinates. He might get away for golf one afternoon a week and go home to his family circle in the evening much as his employees did.

But the rules are all changed now. Business is trussed up by so many new laws and regulations that the executive must pass on everything or find his company either in the frying pan or the fire. A foreman is afraid to fire a man for insubordination without asking the superintendent. They both wind up in the head office discussing possible repercussions from the N.L.R.B. The gifted advertising manager wonders if under the Wheeler-Lea Act he could state in an advertisement that "Lizzie Brownham's Asparagus Compound grows hair on the chest and restores virility." He decided he had better put it up to the Boss.

About this time the sales manager has a problem. If he registers under the Fair Trade Act in Arkansas where will that leave the company with regard to the anti-trust Law? Too big a problem to pass on himself, so he makes a date to meet the company attorney at the general manager's office.

Mr. Boss used to be a planner and a creator, writes Arthur Walsh in Nation's Business. "Now he must, in fairness to his stockholders, be a monitor first and a guiding genius next. So much of his time is taken up in a judiciary capacity that he is lucky indeed if he can make any contribution to his company in a leadership capacity."

Not Good for the Country

DECISION by Homer Martin's automobile workers union to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor will not add to the prospects of peace between Mr. Green's national body and Mr. Lewis's CIO.

It may also be doubted that it will relieve the automobile industry from labor stresses and strains. Likewise it may present to the National Labor Relations Board some additional problems which it might well pray it be spared. It does apparently give to the Martin organization the backing of the older national organization of unionized labor, whatever that may be worth to it.

As a means, however, of lessening danger of union competition within big industry, it can hardly be said that this latest realignment is anything to be desired. Industry suffers as an innocent third party when it becomes the victim of jurisdictional disputes between labor leaders. The intensity of the break between the Lewis and Green forces is now augmented by the bitterness which has marked the break between Lewis and Martin.

These things are not good for the country, they are not good for either industry or labor. They are created solely to serve the ambitions of individuals.

Where Have We Been?

PERHAPS the most disconcerting figures to Americans contained in the data published by the League of Nations are those concerned with industrial production in the nations of the world. They show that the United States stands seventeenth—far below all others—in the recovery of industrial production.

The League of Nations report sets 1929 as a normal year and then reveals that as of 1938 the United States produces industrially but 72.3 per cent of what it did in 1929. France and Belgium are the only two countries which make nearly as bad a showing with 76.9 per cent and 75.1 per cent respectively. In addition, only the Netherlands, Canada and Italy remain below the 1929 level, Italy showing 98.6 per cent recovery; Canada showing 90.0 per cent recovery and the Netherlands 89.8 per cent. On a rising scale the other nations range from the United Kingdom with 115.7 per cent recovery to Latvia with 174.5 per cent recovery in industrial production.

Japan is listed as slightly better than 170 per cent. Finland shows 152.5 per cent recovery; Sweden 146.0 per cent; Estonia 145.5 per cent; Chile 136.8 per cent; Denmark 135.0 per cent; Norway 127.2 per cent; Germany 126.2 per cent; and Poland 117.3 per cent.

Perhaps the most significant of all of the comparisons is that between the volumes of production in Canada and those in this country. Canada suffered from the impact of the great depression as severely as did the United States, and in some respects she was even harder hit, but during the recovery years she has steadily managed to have less relative unemployment and larger increases of production than this country, and she has done so with smaller proportional increases in her public debt.

The New Deal cry has been "on toward recovery." The slogan is excellent but the performance has fallen far short of the ideals of a vibrant America.

Bits of Wisdom

A CLIPPING comes to hand that makes good reading. The News is not sure, but it seems to have been taken from the old Youth's Companion, the famous Boston weekly that entertained and inspired the elders of today when they were youngsters. It is a short collection of apothegms:

"Do not begin a job with a hurrah and finish it with an excuse.

"Look before or, as Poor Richard warns us, you will find yourself behind.

"Perhaps you have observed that the man who has a long head seldom has a long tongue.

"It is a great deal easier to find an engine than it is to find an engineer.

"Of every hundred men called failures, ninety-seven have been lukewarm in their work.

"The success secret of any captain of the world's progress: He did more than was expected of him.

"Following the line of least resistance is what makes rivers and men crooked.

"You need never fear the man who tells you to go to perdition.

"It does not look well to see the children wearing all the good clothes in the family.

"It is not necessary to furnish security in order to borrow trouble.

"By all means sympathize with the under dog, but before you give your sympathy see that he is not a wolf."

Now they've discovered a bug which hops forward, backward and sideways with equal speed. Imagine an insect with all the qualities of an international statesman.

I Could Be Perfect, but---

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I know a lot about raising children perfectly. . . I have read dozens of books on the subject. I have done much thinking about it. I used to get rather good "marks" in school, so at least I have a good memory, regardless of what you may think of my intelligence.

So I know about children. . . I used to be one of them and I think I remember what it was like.

I know how much sleep they should have.

I know how they should be treated.

I have a fairly accurate idea of what goes on in their minds and what they think of grownups. (It isn't flattering.)

I know that what they should be heard respectfully and that they should be treated with consideration.

I know that children like to know where they stand; they like a "no" to mean "no" and a "yes" to mean "yes."

I know that parents shouldn't fuss and nag.

They should treat their children like intelligent human beings.

They should not let small irritations trouble them.

They should keep their promises.

Their homes should be quietly and restful and really HOME for the young people, where the truth can always be told and where the child will be happy and at ease.

In fact, I know a lot about what a parent should be and I know a lot more than I have set down here. If I tried to write all I know about raising children it would fill a fat book and people would write me for advice and I would be a recognized expert on the subject.

BUT—

But my knowledge is far greater than my capacity to perform. I know a lot, but I don't do a lot. I could be perfect, but you can ask any of my children if I AM. . . And I'd rather not be there when they answer.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

On July 3, 1874, the Philadelphia Public Ledger printed, obscurely, the following notice:

"Lost, on the 1st instant, a small boy, about four years of age; light complexion and curly hair. A suitable reward will be paid for his return to E. L. Joyce, Central Station, corner of Fifth and Chestnut Streets."

Today, in Phoenix, Arizona, there is a 69-year-old carpenter known as Gustave Blair, who says he is that missing Person—the kidnapped Charley Ross whose story has run through two generations and still remains a baffling mystery after all these years, still a classic in crime even in modern times and with far more recent "snatches" of dramatic and tragic sequel.

An Arizona judge accepts Mr. Blair's claim and rules that he is the missing Charley Ross. However, it was rather a perfunctory judgment in default, as the relatives of Charley Ross sued for recognition of Mr. Blair's family status, did not appear. No money was demanded. Mr. Blair sought legal identification merely to allow him to be remarried in Germantown, Pa., the home of Charley Ross, on July 1, under his own name. The ruling of the judge received only casual attention in the newspapers. Not that interest in this news perennial will ever fade. It is merely that there have been so many Charley Rosses that one more or less doesn't seem to matter.

Edwin C. Hill

Great Stir at First

The late Captain Ayres, of the New York Bureau of Missing Persons, used to remark on a dull day, "Well, it's about time for somebody to drop in and say he is Charley Ross." When the first of these self-identifiers appeared in the person of William Van Hodge, of Galveston, there was a great stir in the papers. Mr. Van Hodge had some rather impressive evidence, but somehow it trailed on out of the back pages and was forgotten.

Then came Charles Burton Ross, of Cleveland; W. R. Coleman and Charles Burton Ross, of New York; Julius Dellinger, of Denver; L. D. Bond, of Dayton; Daniel Peters, of Livingston, N. Y.; Walter Brownston, dying on Welfare Island still declaring, with his dying breath, that he was Charley Ross—these and countless others on down through the years.

A curious detail of singular record is the fact that all of these claimants were apparently honest, hard-working persons, as is this Arizona carpenter, apparently absolutely convinced of the truth of their claims. None was unbalanced. In no case was hope of money involved. Several offered what appeared superficially to be convincing proof.

America's First

This was America's first notorious kidnapping. They used chalk plates in the newspaper then, for it was before the days of the "clips" and photo-engraving. Compared to present time, their resources and facilities were meagre in publicizing and sensationalizing the kidnapping of the tiny lad with the yellow curls, but they made the most of what they had. And they certainly had the ingredients of a big story—all the more of a sensation because of its novelty. In the days before kidnapping had become an established industry.

Christian K. Ross was a well-to-do Philadelphia dry-goods jobber. Baby Charley and his brother Walter, aged 6, were playing on the lawn in front of the family's imposing Currier and Ives residence in Germantown. Two unkempt-looking fellows drove up in a shabby buggy, lured the boy into the rig, drove off and gave Walter a quarter to buy candy. When the lad came out from the candy store, the buggy with the two men and his brother had disappeared.

On July 4, the father received a letter which said that Charley was being held for a ransom of $20,000. And there was this warning:

"Any approach to his hiding place will be made the signal for his instant annihilation. Will write later."

Less Callous Than

Reading the stories of the country's rage and horror at this date, one would think that we must have been much more sensitive, much less callous then than we seem to be now in the face of cumulative horrors. The whole nation turned out on a man hunt. A rendezvous was made with the kidnapers at a New York hotel, with the ransom money ready, but they did not keep their appointment.

It was years before the excitement and the activities of volunteer detectives began to die down. Newspapers fought a pest of clairvoyants, people who had seen Charley Ross in a vision, spiritualists bringing in town ghostly tribes of Indians who brought word that the lad had been adopted into a far-western Indian tribe. Mothers wept all over the country as a national detective agency scattered thousands of photographs throughout the land.

"The Amalgamated Friends of Charley Ross" became a nationally organized society. Nobody could say the newspapers were pumping this up. It was merely a manifestation of spontaneous public feeling. Kidnaping was then and is now a tremendous moving story, one which stirs the fires of anger and tugs at the heartstrings of pity.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

As It Now Stands

Let us discuss this major battle as if it went on to the end in the form in which it now is—that is, with Mr. Roosevelt contending for the nomination as head of the New Deal wing of the party, Mr. Garner contending as head of the orthodox Democratic wing. Let us assume that a year from today, on the eve of the Democratic national convention, the situation has narrowed down to a clear-cut, simple political duel between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner.

In such a situation, who would be the better candidate for the Democrats to nominate? By "better candidate" is meant the one who, in the general election against the Republican nominee, would get the larger vote. Which, as between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner, would make the better campaign against the Republicans?

To answer this question we must consider what would be the course of the followers of the defeated candidate? For example, suppose Mr. Roosevelt wins. In that event, what would the followers of the defeated Mr. Garner do? Most of them no doubt would vote the regular ticket, for Mr. Roosevelt. But there would be an aggrieved group made up of strongly conservative Democrats, who would bitterly dislike to support Mr. Roosevelt. To such, there would be an easy course. They would have a place to go. They could vote the Republican ticket and satisfy their conservatism.

Cul de Sac for New Dealers

But suppose the outcome were the other way—suppose Mr. Garner won the nomination. What would the New Dealers do? Most of the New Dealers—those who are Democrats first and New Dealers afterward—would support Mr. Garner. But what course would be open to the extreme New Dealers? Specifically, for example, what would Mr. Thomas Corcoran do, or Mr. Harry Hopkins? Or the body of extreme Deal voters who are symbol-

Recreational Wonderland

From the West Virginia Review.

West Virginia has become known throughout the nation as a recreational wonderland of mountain and valley, forest and stream—the fulfilled dream of the tourist.

Today splendid highways wind through valleys and forests and around mountains, opening up ever-changing panoramas of loveliness. New routes have been finished through the state and national forests, past mountain streams—into a vacation land which appeals to the nature-lover, the artist, the sportsman or just plain motorist.

All of these things West Virginia has to offer for the gratification of tourists and those who seek healthful outdoor recreation. We have publicized these attractions and each season shows an increase in the number of tourists who respond to our invitation to come to West Virginia. In fact, the number of tourists who annually come to our state is larger than those for whom we can furnish first-class accommodations. This will be true, we believe, even during the coming season. More modernly equipped tourist camps are needed. Many present camps and other facilities need to be brought up to date to meet the demands that will be made on them.

This need, we are sure, will be given deep consideration by those persons who officially represent the state in its program designed to attract more visitors to West Virginia. It might well receive the attention, also, of those who wish to invest wisely for profit to themselves.

Cul de Sac for New Dealers

But suppose the outcome were the other way—suppose Mr. Garner won the nomination. What would the New Dealers do? Most of the New Dealers—those who are Democrats first and New Dealers afterward—would support Mr. Garner. But what course would be open to the extreme New Dealers? By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, June 11—Looking toward the Democratic presidential nomination, there are two major movements. A member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, Mr. Harold Ickes, has said publicly and forcefully that the president ought to have a third term. And friends of Vice-President Garner have said positively that his name will go before the convention. These two movements are major. Mr. Roosevelt is the symbol of the New Deal wing of the party in power. Mr. Garner is the symbol of the orthodox Democratic wing.

Besides these, there are minor movements. A formal movement for ex-Governor McNutt of Indiana has been under way for some time. In various states the local Democratic organization is preparing to send delegates to the convention instructed for some local Democratic leader, a senator or a governor, as a "favorite son." But all these smaller movements are for the present comparatively negligible. Whether any of these minor movements ever amounts to anything is dependent on the outcome of the big-rig battle between the New Dealers symbolized by Mr. Roosevelt, and the orthodox Democrats, symbolized by Mr. Garner.

As It Now Stands

Let us discuss this major battle as if it went on to the end in the form in which it now is—that is, with Mr. Roosevelt contending for the nomination as head of the New Deal wing of the party, Mr. Garner contending as head of the orthodox Democratic wing. Let us assume that a year from today, on the eve of the Democratic national convention, the situation has narrowed down to a clear-cut, simple political duel between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner.

In such a situation, who would be the better candidate for the Democrats to nominate? By "better candidate" is meant the one who, in the general election against the Republican nominee, would get the larger vote. Which, as between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner, would make the better campaign against the Republicans?

To answer this question we must consider what would be the course of the followers of the defeated candidate? For example, suppose Mr. Roosevelt wins. In that event, what would the followers of the defeated Mr. Garner do? Most of them no doubt would vote the regular ticket, for Mr. Roosevelt. But there would be an aggrieved group made up of strongly conservative Democrats, who would bitterly dislike to support Mr. Roosevelt. To such, there would be an easy course. They would have a place to go. They could vote the Republican ticket and satisfy their conservatism.

But suppose the outcome were the other way—suppose Mr. Garner won the nomination. What would the New Dealers do? Most of the New Dealers—those who are Democrats first and New Dealers afterward—would support Mr. Garner. But what course would be open to the extreme New Dealers? Specifically, for example, what would Mr. Thomas Corcoran do, or Mr. Harry Hopkins? Or the body of extreme Deal voters who are symbolized by Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Corcoran. What would these do? What would be open to them? They certainly would find no satisfaction in voting the Republican ticket. To vote for the Republican candidate for president would be less satisfactory than voting for Mr. Garner, much as they may disapprove Mr. Garner.

Any extreme New Dealer, in his present state of excited emotion, may vow that never on God's footstool will he vote for John Garner. But this extreme New Dealer neglects to anticipate what would be his position after Mr. Garner is nominated. Political leaders anticipate this, however, and know that after the extreme New Dealer's emotion has died down, and he sees as his only alternatives Mr. Garner and a Republican, he will conclude, in many cases, to vote for Mr. Garner. In short, the political leaders who will have much to do with the Democratic National Convention, may reasonably anticipate that they could nominate Mr. Garner, and still hold most of the New Deal voters to the Democratic party.

Would Aid G. O. P.

It may be said that voting the Republican ticket is not the only alternative open to a New Dealer disgruntled by the nomination of Mr. Garner. It may be said that the extreme New Dealers would vote for a third party. But suppose they do. They will merely be helping to elect the Republican candidate. A New Deal vote for a third party would be almost as effective a help to the Republicans as a direct vote for the Republican party.

All that is said here is merely this: that the Democratic party leaders would lose fewer voters by nominating Mr. Garner than by nominating Mr. Roosevelt. It is not intended to imply that either Mr. Garner or Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated. The greater probability is the nominee will be some middle-of-the-road man upon whom both the orthodox Democrats and the New Dealers can reasonably agree.

History Has Been Outdone

From the Cincinnati Times Star

For many weeks now, some of the most interesting news out of Washington has come from the House committee investigating WPA. What that committee has found concerning the activities of Workers' Alliance leaders in this country and abroad should be of exceptional interest to the American public.

The other day Charles H. White, negro employe on a Federal Writers' Project in New York, told the committee that the "national hunger march" on Washington during the winter of 1932-33 was planned in Moscow. White should know whereof he speaks because he was a member of the Communist party from 1930 to 1936 and spent 18 months in Moscow studying at the College of Professional Communists.

While he was in the Soviet capital, says White, a visit was paid there by Herbert Benjamin, secretary-treasurer of the Workers' Alliance, who is alleged to have spent all his time in Moscow planning the march on the Capitol at Washington.

Benjamin, an admitted member of the Communist party, had previously told the committee that his visit to Moscow was paid for by the Alliance, which is supported by ex-dues from WPA workers, who in

Semantics Gets An Explanation

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., June 11—Mr. Arthur Krock seems to have dug up for the New York Times a document saying in print what has long been well-known and accepted fact in Washington—that Fourth New Dealers and even witnesses before investigating committees are being coached in a new language, or at least a new vocabulary. Its theory does not deny that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet but it goes much further than the principle that the good peddler should use a street-vary "Rotten fish for sale."

So somebody, probably Stuart Chase, has produced a deodorizing memorandum. You don't call drunken-sailor governmental extravagance "spending." You call it "investing." You refer to unbearable debts as valuable investment. If you get up a phony budget, you don't call it a "double-entry" budget. You call it a budget on a "business basis." This art is called "semantics."

It is a good thing Arthur has the evidence on this "semantic" business. On two or three other recent occasions when he reported things pretty well known in Washington, but not reduced to writing, he has flatly contradicted on authority so high that it was simply not seemly to continue the argument. The contradictions were probably "semantic." Mr. Krock is very careful and he has excellent associates. They usually check every assertion about three ways. This time that won't be necessary.

In "Huckleberry Finn"

Mr. Chase, however, did not invent "semantics." They began in the Garden of Eden when the serpent told Eve that forbidden fruit would "make her wise." The whole of history and literature abounds in "semantics." The commonest type is that taught to Huckleberry Finn by his old Pap—the town bum. Pap said it is all right to snatch other people's things—a shirt from the clothes lines, a chicken from the coop or a watermelon from the patch—if you only say to yourself, "Some day I'll return this. Without out that it would be stealing, but with that it is only borrowing." So Huck and Jim "semantically" "borrowed" their way down most of the Mississippi River.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford was a master of "semantics" and so were all of O. Henry's gentle grafters. A horse trader who, when asked to a blind mare he was about to sell, had good eyesight, told his dupe, "She can see as well at night as she can in the daytime." That was a perfect "semanticist."

It was good "semantics" when the Allies grabbed all the German colonies and called it "accepting a mandate." Mr. Musica was using "semantics" when he called his empty Canadian drug warehouse "assets." That was exactly the same kind of "semantics" that is involved in called spending "investing" and debts "investments." A gold brick is "semantics" for value and so is counterfeit money.

Mean the Same Thing

Of course, they are degrees of semanticism all the way from perfectly innocent softening of ugly words for ugly facts, like saying that a person "passed on" when you mean "died," or that a man smells when you really mean that he stinks and you smell him. There is no harm in this because both words mean exactly the same thing to the hearer. He is not fooled and the speaker is not trying to fool him. Especially is there no attempt to fool him to his disadvantage.

But a "semantic" who attempts to beguile a listener into believing that something he is offering him will do him good when it will grievously harm him—even if it is not technically a lie or actionably fraudulent—is certainly no much idealism and as we are constantly taught by the Fourth New Dealers to expect from the use of "idealism" is also "semantic." —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

All this is very interesting. It is especially interesting since, while White was testifying, the Workers' Alliance was holding a convention in Washington, the cost of which is also, no doubt, indirectly paid by Uncle Sam. Most interesting of all is the fact that Attorney General Murphy and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt appear on the Alliance convention program as speakers.

We submit this data with a question: Can you conceive of such things on at any previous time in the history of the Republic?

SALUTE THE MAJOR

MANY ADDICTS of match point duplicate kick away scores by laying too much stress on the value of No Trump contracts as against major suit ones. This is all very well and good if the partner of the suit bidder has an even distribution, but if he possesses a singleton his hand will nearly always produce one more trick at a fitting major suit than at No Trump, and this is usually the case also if he holds a doubleton. One ruffed trick can mean the difference between the side scoring 120 for tricks at the major suit and an even 100 at No Trump.

Some Help for You in— Facing the Future

LYNN BARN... whose clear, smooth complexion indicates care.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PROFESSIONAL treatments of the complexion vary but they all strive toward the same ends, a thorough cleansing of the pores, a stimulation of blood streams and firming of the tissues. Time was when the facial operator was a strong armed amazon who did a lot of pounding and thumping which may or may not have put feminine faces out of form. Now treatments are light and invigorating. The light touch youthifies; heavy work weakens tissues that have started along the road toward dissolution.

There is a silly superstition about facials, that if you start them you must keep them up or lose the good effects. Nonsense, that is. Each one helps.

MRS. RALPH PARKS HASLACKER

Pretty Wedding Ceremony Unites Miss Somerville and R. J. Haslacker

An exceptionally pretty June wedding ceremony united Miss W. Elizabeth Somerville, daughter of Mrs. J. Wesley Porter Somerville and the late Mr. Somerville, and Ralph Parks Haslacker, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Haslacker, 19 South Lee street, at 12:30 p. m. Saturday at the home of the bride, 228 Harrison street.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Hixon T. Bowersox, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church. The home was decorated with pennants, roses and pink gladioli. In a large bay window of the front room, two beautiful candelabras offset the white kneeling bench which held two white satin pillows, and was banked on each side with palms and gladioli.

The bride was gowned with white silk marquisette with a fitted bodice and puffed sleeves edged with white lace and embroidery. The full skirt which swept the floor, was edged with white lace on the bottom. The bride wore a fingertip illusion veil of white, gathered at the top and held with a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies-of-the-valley, with streamers of white satin. A string of choker pearls, gift of the bridegroom, framed the round collar of the bodice.

SALUTE THE MAJOR

MANY ADDICTS of match point duplicate kick away scores by laying too much stress on the value of No Trump contracts as against major suit ones. This is all very well and good if the partner of the suit bidder has an even distribution, but if he possesses a singleton his hand will nearly always produce one more trick at a fitting major suit than at No Trump, and this is usually the case also if he holds a doubleton. One ruffed trick can mean the difference between the side scoring 120 for tricks at the major suit and an even 100 at No Trump.

Some Help for You in - Facing the Future

LYNN BANE... whose clear, smooth complexion indicates care.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PROFESSIONAL treatments of the complexion vary but they all strive toward the same ends, a thorough cleansing of the pores, a stimulation of blood streams and firming of the tissues. Time was when the facial operator was a strong armed amazon who did a lot of pounding and thumping which may or may not have put feminine faces out of form. Now treatments are light and invigorating. The light touch youthifies; heavy work weakens tissues that have started along the road toward dissolution.

There is a silly superstition about facials, that if you start them you must keep them up or lose the good effects. Nonsense, that is. Each one helps.

Operators have to go through a long course of training, learn about facial fibers, their relation to each other, nerves, tissues, arteries. The beauty trade has stepped a long way since mama was a girl and had her face hammered.

There's nothing more restful or refreshing than a facial treatment given by an expert. It's not only a facial; it includes neck, shoulders and the upper portions of the back. In some shops it includes a quick session at calisthenics so the flesh will be warm, more responsive to nourishing oils and lotions that bring color to the cheeks.

But, of course, you have to do your home work, wash and cream your face at bedtime, use cold water in the morning and possibly an astringent.

Keystone Farmers Get Carloads of Lime, Phosphate

Take Up Federal Offer of Materials To Aid Pastures

By ALLAN CRIST
Harrisburg, Pa., June 11 (P)—Farmers throughout Pennsylvania are "taking up" the federal government on its offer of lime and superphosphate for application to pasture lands, the state agricultural conservation committee says.

"We have received orders from counties spotted all over the state for carloads of these materials," the executive reported.

The idea is to encourage development of soil in pasture lands and increase the farmers' income, he explained.

"Pasture land has been neglected," he went on. "It used to be that farmers would put their fertilizer only on cash-crop lands, figuring that if anything had to be neglected, it should be the pasture. Now, however, they're coming to realize the value of pastures, because if that's good, they don't have to buy so much grain feeds and commercial dairy rations."

Under the program, the farmer applying for lime and superphosphate pays a small cash deposit to cover local handling charges. Then the farmer gets paid by the government if he actually applies the material to pasture lands only—not to other fields—and abides by the rules of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Theatres Today

"Whispering Enemies" And "Service De Luxe" Now Showing at Embassy

Embassy Theatre ads call him "the most dangerous man in America"—the man with the poison tongue—and Embassy Theatre audiences, after attending yesterday's performance of Columbia's "Whispering Enemies" are strongly inclined to agree. This timely new Jack Holt vehicle, with its suspenseful, breath-taking record of a national scandal syndicate which will, for pay, destroy any reputation of any firm or any individual, is one of the most powerful of all recent screen offerings.

Today, as never before, is the "whispering campaign" a menace in American life, and now, for the first time, the screen throws the racket's slimy viciousness open to the blinding light of publicity.

Take two stars, three comedians, a crack director, an excellent story and a wealth of production—literally and figuratively, you've got "Service De Luxe," the Universal laugh-maker, seen last night at the Embassy Theatre.

The stars are Constance Bennett and Vincent Price. Perhaps it's a bit early to dub Price a cinema star. It is his first screen effort. But star he is, if a smooth, convincing performance, a truckload of personality and a heap of ability makes a star.

Laughton and Mrs. L. Teamed in New Film

In private life, Elsa Lanchester is the wife of Charles Laughton, distinguished screen and stage actor. Although she has appeared with him several times in pictures previous to her role in "The Beachcomber," which is now at the Garden Theatre, never has the distaff half of the family had such a chance to shine as in this picture. An actress particularly distinguished for her comedy roles, she made her screen debut in 1932 in "Blue-Buttons." More recently she appeared with her husband in "Henry VIII" and "Rembrandt." According to no less an authority than her husband, her new role in "The Beachcomber," which is based on the W. Somerset Maugham story, "Vessel of Wrath," shows her in a new light as a player of great range and power.

It's lucky for Nancy Kelly that her friend Joan Valerie was cast with her in "Tail Spin." If she hadn't been, a fatal accident might have resulted.

During the shooting of the 20th Century-Fox film, which is now at the Garden Theatre, Nancy unwittingly walked into the whirling propeller of one of the racing planes on the set. She was jerked to safety by Joan a hair-split second before the blade could do any damage. As it was, two buttons were sliced off the leather jacket Nancy was wearing.

A Novel Twist
For An Old Dish

Director Crane Wilbur had what he thought was a good gag. Opening sequences in "The Man Who Dared," the Warner Bros. picture now showing at the Liberty, concerned dinner in the home of a middle-class family.

Because of the children, Wilbur insisted on spinach being served as one of the vegetables. Everybody knows of the universal dislike of spinach by youngsters, he reasoned, so the situation should be productive of some good gags. He got the laughs but not the way he expected.

The children were so fond of the spinach that they kept the prop men scurrying back and forth supplying them with enough for all.

"But why?" Wilbur asked dazedly. "If it's good enough for Popeye the Sailor it's good enough for us," they explained. "We want to be strong just like the sailor."

"It's good to play a role which has truth in it," explained Donald Crisp as he settled down in one of the canvas chairs on the set of "Sons Of Liberty" now at the Liberty. Warner Bros' feature of the struggle for American independence.

"You really got something to work on. Now I'm playing Alexander MacDougal, a Scotchman who led the 'Sons of Liberty.' It means I have to play him as he was, not as a make-believe man I make up as I go.

"It's a real opportunity for an actor to find a way to do his bit

for a cause as big as this one. It's like making history."

"Tell No Tales" Today, Tomorrow At Maryland

Striking a keynote of distinct originality, "Tell No Tales," featuring Melvyn Douglas at the Maryland Theatre, proves to be dramatic entertainment of the highest order, replete with breathless and suspenseful action.

It's one of the most unusual dramas ever to reach the screen. Five separate stories with five separate sets of characters are told, each intensely dramatic in itself, and all building to a high climax of action and drama.

The picture reveals the efforts of Melvyn Douglas, as a doggedly determined reporter, to bring to justice a group of criminals guilty of a murder and kidnapping. A hundred-dollar note, part of the ransom money, falls into his hands by accident. Step by step he traces the trail back to its original source. In breath-taking sequences, with death ever at his shoulder, Douglas pursues his relentless course through the highways and byways of a great city until the final nerve-shattering climax.

Ever a master of the dramatic form, Douglas turns in one of his most moving and convincing performances in the role of the reporter. Louise Platt is the engaging love interest, with Gene Lockhart, Douglas Dumbrie, Florence George, Halliwell Hobbes, Zeffie Tilbury, Hardan Briggs, Sara Haden, Hobart Cavanaugh, Oscar O'Shea and others of the large cast giving superb support in a picture expertly directed by Leslie Fenton.

"Music By Golly" At Crystal Thursday

"Just as a product in the market is known by its trademark," says Cecil Golly, the modern music maestro, with his sweet rhythmic brand of "Music by Golly" at Crystal Thursday, "so is a band known by its style of music. After hearing only a few measures the radio or phonograph listeners can easily ascertain which of their favorite bands are playing."

"Each of the popular orchestras on the air or making recordings today, has a special interpretation by which it has become identified. The conductors of these musical groups interpret songs to follow their individual conceptions. Cab Calloway, for instance, specializes in the rhythmic, hot style, while Guy Lombardo, at the other extreme, produces sweet, lulling music, featuring the muffled brasses."

"All this is brought about by a behind-the-scenes profession known as 'arranging,' which started in a modest way, and has grown to such proportions that the foremost leaders now employ staffs of four to ten people."

"Many critics claim that arranging is appreciated only by musicians, the group 'in the know.' However, I believe that audiences also are thoroughly acquainted with the musical variations in stock and special arrangements. One of the proofs of this is the numerous requests I have received for specific orchestrations."

"The practice has been beneficial. I think for it has created a variety which was lacking a few years ago. If there were no special arrangements, the sameness of the orchestras would become monotonously boring."

"Of course, there is an objection often advanced which has some value. The practice of arranging may be carried so far that the thread of the melody is completely lost. I am personally opposed to this move. The melody should be retained despite the variations which are made."

These Golly arrangements are considered by critics and laymen alike to be the ultimate in modern orchestrations.

The band will present a host of entertainers, that charming Gail Nancy Gay, who can sell her songs a la Martha Raye; Gene Eyman, a sure fire scat singer; Ray Carroll, The Three Gees and many other entertainers.

Stage Show Continues

Opening last night at midnight and continuing today and tomorrow, Solie Childs presented for the first time in Cumberland his "Moulin Rouge Revue."

There are thirty-five sterling performers with the attractions including the following vaudeville acts: Miss Elizabeth Graves, internationally famous dance artist who has played all the leading cities here in the United States and on the European Continent. She is well known for her lovely creations and beautiful dance. The Wells Bros. Trio is an outstanding aerial act that was a late feature of the Cole Bros. Circus. They are really sensational. The Donley Sisters, a very clever sister team, present a very artistic Russian number and other novelties.

Eleanor King, the unusual contorionist; Ruth Morgan, the military tapster; Lee Bishop and Madame Queen, the most sensational dog act appearing on the stage. Queenie walks on the wire blindfolded and does countless other amazing tricks.

Joe Kelso of world-wide fame, was born in Australia, has toured the Orient, India and Africa. He is a great magician, juggler, dancer and impersonator of actors of past and present renown. Miss Shirley Lee is the pet drum major and dancer with the lovely smile and twinkling toes. Bobbie Vail, who is known for his Broadway successes, pops in and out during the show and keeps the audience laughing. Raul and Rita, one of America's foremost dance teams, direct from Hollywood successes, have played in RKO pictures and also played in George Raft's picture, "Bulldog." Also, Girls, Girls, Girls. A bevy of beautiful girls from the deep south, glamorous and talented. They present well-learned numbers, gorgeously costumed. Solie Childs stage band will furnish the music. The screen attraction is "Charlie Chan in Reno," which stars Sidney Toler, Slim Summerville and Phyllis Brooks. Critics say it is the most entertaining Chan picture produced to date.

Salem, W. Va., June 11 (AP)—Citizens will vote in a special election July 11 on a council-approved proposal for the issuance of $12,000 in bonds for the construction of a new municipal building.

Keystone Farmers Get Carloads of Lime, Phosphate

Take Up Federal Offer of Materials To Aid Pastures

By ALLAN CRIST
Harrisburg, Pa., June 11 (AP)—Farmers throughout Pennsylvania are "taking up" the federal government's offer of lime and superphosphate for application to pasture lands, the state agricultural conservation committee says.

"We have received orders from counties spotted all over the state for carloads of these materials," the executive reported.

The idea is to encourage development of soil in pasture lands and increase the farmers' income, he explained.

"Pasture land has been neglected," he went on. "It used to be that farmers would put their fertilizer only on cash-crop lands, figuring that if anything had to be neglected, it should be the pasture. Now, however, they're coming to realize the value of pastureage, because if that's good, they don't have to buy so much grain feeds and commercial dairy rations."

Under the program, the farmer applying for lime and superphosphate pays a small cash deposit to the local handling charges. Then the farmer gets paid by the government if he actually applies the material to pasture lands only—not to other fields—and abides by the green soil-building practices outlined by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Theatres Today

"Whispering Enemies" And "Service De Luxe" Now Showing at Embassy

Embassy Theatre ads call him "the most dangerous man in America... the man with the poison tongue" and Embassy Theatre audiences, after attending yesterday's performance of Columbia's "Whispering Enemies" are strongly inclined to agree. This timely new Jack Holt vehicle, with its suspenseful, breath-taking record of a national scandal syndicate which will, for pay, destroy any reputation of any firm or any individual, is one of the most powerful of all recent screen offerings.

Today, as never before, is the "whispering campaign" a menace in American life, and now, for the first time, the screen throws the racket's slimy viciousness open to the blazing light of publicity.

Take two stars, three comedians, a crack director, an excellent story and a wealth of production — and literally and figuratively, you've got "Service De Luxe," the Universal laugh-maker, seen last night at the Embassy Theatre.

The stars are Constance Bennett and Vincent Price. Perhaps it's a bit early to dub Price a cinema star. It is his first screen effort. But star he is, if a smooth, convincing performance, a truckload of personality and a heap of ability makes a star.

Laughton and Mrs. L. Teamed in New Film

In private life, Elsa Lanchester is the wife of Charles Laughton, distinguished screen and stage actor. Although she has appeared with him several times in pictures previously to her role in "The Beachcomber," which is now at the Garden Theatre, never has the distaff half of the family had such a chance to shine as in this picture. An actress particularly distinguished for her comedy roles, she made her screen debut in 1932 in "Blue-bottles." More recently she appeared with her husband in "Henry the VIII" and "Rembrandt." According to no less an authority than her husband, her new role in "The Beachcomber," which is based on the W. Somerset Maugham story, "Vessel of Wrath," shows her in a new light as a player of great range and power.

It's lucky for Nancy Kelly that her friend Joan Valerie was cast with her in "Tail Spin." If she hadn't been, a fatal accident might have resulted.

During the shooting of the 20th Century-Fox film, which is now at the Garden Theatre, Nancy unwittingly walked into the whirling propeller of one of the racing planes on the set. She was jerked to safety by Joan's hair-split second before the blade could do any damage. As it was, two buttons were sliced off the leather jacket Nancy was wearing.

A Novel Twist For An Old Dish

Director Crane Wilbur had what he thought was a good gag. Opening sequences in "The Man Who Dared," the Warner Bros. picture now showing at the Liberty, concerned dinner in the home of a middle-class family.

Because of the children, Wilbur insisted on spinach being served as one of the vegetables. Everybody knows of the universal dislike of spinach by youngsters, he reasoned, so the situation should be productive of some good gags. He got the laughs but not the way he expected.

The children were so fond of the spinach that they kept the prop men scurrying back and forth supplying them with enough for all.

"But why?" Wilbur asked dazedly. "If it's good enough for Popeye the Sailor it's good enough for us," they explained. "We want to be strong just like the sailor."

"It's good to play a role which has truth in it," explained Donald Crisp as he settled down in one of the canvas chairs on the set of "Sons of Liberty" now at the Liberty. Warner Bros. feature of the struggle for American independence.

"You really got something to work on. Now I'm playing Alexander MacDougal, a Scotchman who led the 'Sons of Liberty.' It means I have to play him as he was, not as a make-believe man I make up as I go.

"It's a real opportunity for an actor to find a way to do his bit

Wood and Nelson Are Tied in Hole Play-off

Both Shoot Fine Golf; Shute out of the Running

Second Playoff for Title Will Start This Morning at 8:30

By BILL BONI
Philadelphia, June 11 (AP)—Craig Wood, the blond bomber from Lamar, N. Y., who has been playing with most of his golfing through on the eighteenth hole of the Philadelphia country club's annual Phil course today with the third National Open golf championship virtually tucked in a pocket.

The 37-year-old veteran had played 17 holes, in the face of a stiff breeze, in one under par. He had one-stroke lead over Byron Nelson, who was still jittery after three holes of the 17th, and Denny Shute, who was too far behind to figure in this three way play-off in the game's biggest prize.

But before Wood had finished his 558-yard hole-in-one, a tragic 8 blows yesterday—Craig hit a screaming brassie second round that felled a spectator; Nelson chipped seven feet from the pin and holed his putt for a 20-hole 18.

And Wood, a good foot on the ball, had a winning putt eight inches short of the can. He finished with a 68 for a one-under-par 68, and won the title into another 18 hole play-off.

The second round, with Shute out of it after taking a 76, will start at 8:30 a. m. (E.S.T.) tomorrow.

Accident Helps Wood
That booming brassie of Wood's was a good one, the fact that it struck one of the 5,000 gallerites might have been the accident that felled the champion. Accidentally, it may have saved him another shot at it, for Wood, one of the game's longest hitters, apparently had made a mistake in judgment of distance and the ball was headed for trouble.

Instead, it hit Bob Mossman, a riding range operator from nearby Elmora, Pa., above the right temple, and dropped him into an unconscious heap, with blood flowing from the wound. Wood's ball landed a good forty feet into the middle of the fairway, 15 yards from the green.

It was a thoroughly dramatic push to a match that had been played as a drum head all the way. It also was the third time in the history of the open that one round was not sufficient to decide a play-off. Willie MacFarlane had to play 18 hole stretches to beat Bobby Jones in 1925, and Billy Burke had to play two sets of 36 holes each to play two of George Von Elm for the title in 1931.

Two holes before the end, Nelson, a slim ex-Texan from Reading, took the lead for the third time it seemed to have Wood on the ropes.

Wood Plays Safe Golf
On the 16th, a 328 yarder that is easy birdie hole with trouble coming only for the long hitter, he tries to cut the corners to the left, Nelson had pitched six feet from the flag and sunk his putt. Wood, even with him up, was trapped deeply on the hole in front of the green to the left.

Instead of playing for the pin, in the narrow portion of the hole, and thus taking a chance, he took the lead for the third time it seemed to have Wood on the ropes.

On the 17th, a 328 yarder that is easy birdie hole with trouble coming only for the long hitter, he tries to cut the corners to the left, Nelson had pitched six feet from the flag and sunk his putt. Wood, even with him up, was trapped deeply on the hole in front of the green to the left.

Yankees Win Doubleheader From St. Louis

New York Easily Defeats Lowly Browns 8-5 and 5-1

St. Louis, June 11 (AP)—The unexcitable New York Yankees put a little more distance between themselves and the common herd by mowing down the lowly St. Louis Browns, 8 to 5 and 5 to 1, in a double feature here this afternoon.

Then hitting power spoke sharply in the first inning of the opening game as the Yanks put up a 5-0 lead. After that the pitching of Red Ruffing, who was credited with his ninth win of the season, and expert fielding adequately protected the margin.

In all, the Yanks contributed 17 hits to the first contest, nine of them split equally by Tom Henrich, Joe Di Maggio and Bill Dickey. Everyone took part in the hitting except Charley Keller.

While the New York batting was not quite up to snuff in the nightcap, the defense corps swung into overtime action to give bump Hadley his sixth straight triumph without a loss.

In the fourth inning of the second game, the Yanks stole four bases, three in succession to account for one run.

I WAS TERRIBLE IN CLASS TODAY -- TO THINK I'D FALL IN LOVE AFTER ALL THESE YEARS.

HE'S STARTING A HOPE CHEST FOR ETTA! CAN YOU BEAR IT?

HE'S CUTE! BUT I'M NOT COLLECTING ANTIQUES!

THE PROF. WAS SURE IN A FOG IN CLASS.

HE'S YOUNG AND FULL OF PEPP -- I WONDER IF SHE EVER GIVES AN OLD BACHELOR LIKE ME A SECOND THOUGHT?

BUT THEN I'M ONLY FORTY -- THAT'S NOT BAD! JUST A NICE, SENSIBLE AGE TO MARRY AND SETTLE DOWN!

One Killed, Nine Injured in Week-End Crashes

Church Trustee Dies, Two Women Companions Hurt

Walter M. Donaldson Is Crash Victim; Fails To Make Curve

A dying man and two seriously injured women were found in the front seat of a green sedan at Spring Gap early yesterday morning after their car plunged off the highway, snapped off a telephone pole, and smashed into a culvert.

Walter M. Donaldson, 41, of LaVale, the driver of the car, died at Memorial hospital of skull injuries an hour after he was admitted. He was taken to the hospital by an unidentified motorist.

Rushed to Hospital

The two women, Miss Effie Platt, 40, of 435 Baltimore avenue, and Miss Clarabelle Couter, 39, of 214 Pennsylvania avenue, were hurried to the hospital in two other cars, one driven by J. N. Nicholson, of 205 Fairfax street, and the other by Oscar Wisman, of 300 Grand avenue.

Both women were reported in fair condition last night, with attendants reporting that Miss Platt received a fractured skull, puncture wounds on the legs, and bruises, and Miss Couter, a fractured left leg, lacerations on the face, and bruises.

Donaldson, a clerk for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and a trustee of the Southminster Presbyterian church, left the Nine Mile House around midnight and started for Cumberland accompanied by his two passengers, it was learned.

Snap's Pole

The sedan driven by Donaldson, traveling on a downgrade at Spring Gap, failed to make the curve and crashed into the telephone pole on the left-hand side of the road. The pole snapped, and the car crashed into a culvert.

According to State Trooper Carl G. Storm, who investigated, the left front wheel of the car was smashed back under the clutch and brake of the car. The windshield was shattered, and the steering wheel bent straight up.

A number of Miss Platt's teeth were broken in the accident and were later found at the scene of the wreck. One tooth was found yesterday on the running board of the car at Shaner's garage.

The time of the accident was fixed at 12:45 a. m. at Memorial hospital. The patients were admitted around 1:15 a. m., and Donaldson died at 2:15.

'Vision' Urged On Graduates

Build in the Tomorrow, Pastor Advises

"You are to build and live in the tomorrow" was the challenging thought given Allegheny high school graduates at their baccalaureate service yesterday at Centre Street Methodist church.

The speaker was the Rev. Fred B. Wyand, pastor of Central Methodist church.

"The old may dream dreams of the past and recall the happenings of yesterday," he said, "but you are to build and live in the tomorrow." Taking as his text the declaration of the Pentecostal preacher in the Acts of the Apostles that "your young men shall see visions," he told the graduates that "you, too, shall see visions."

"You are to lift your minds from the things you see, to focus upon the things not yet seen, but which you are to actualize."

Mr. Wyand urged the graduates to "spend time in preparation," declaring that they could not be "too highly trained for the adventurous life" upon which they were embarking.

He told them, too, that they should see a vision of "a world's need," and enter upon a life of service to their fellow-men.

The speaker referred to the life of service led by Christ and explained, "Before then, men conquered the world. Since then, great men serve the world."

The Rev. Dr. Vernon N. Ridgely, pastor of the host church, assisted in the service.

Average Cost of Producing Ton of Soft Coal Is $1.76

Washington, June 11. (AP)—The Bituminous Coal Commission decided today the average cost of producing a ton of coal in Western Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, was $1.76.

The commission said the four state district mines about 18 per cent of the nation's soft coal tonnage.

Under the Guifey act, the commission was directed to fix minimum prices at the mines, at approximating the cost of production.

Prices for the district, the commission said, probably will be announced later this month, subject to final hearings on statistical data. "The new prices for different grades of coal," the commission added, "will vary greatly, depending upon their relative values as to kind, grade and size. The law requires that the prices bring into each district a total amount of money, which, when divided by the number of tons the district has sold, will show an average yield per ton approximating the area's cost of production."

Production costs in the four fields comprising the middle western price area, the commission said, were: Western Kentucky $1.58 a ton; Illinois $1.75; Indiana $1.62 and Iowa, $2.76.

Rubber Workers To Aid Nursery

Kelly Union To Sponsor Benefit Auto Show Here

Local No. 26, United Rubber Workers of America, today had voted to do their bit in the current drive for funds for the Keating Memorial Day Nursery. It was announced by Secretary Ernest M. Puschel.

The Kelly-Springfield local will sponsor an auto show and six auto races at the Cumberland Fair grounds on July 2 as its contribution to the drive headed by L. F. Flynn, general chairman.

At the regular meeting Saturday, June 10, the general body of the local voted to donate one-third of their share of the total gate receipts for the continuance of the nursery program, Mr. Puschel stated.

"The Kelly local decided to back the auto-racing program and show when it was learned that the Keating Memorial Day Nursery, which takes care of 100 children a day, might have to suspend operations unless the community came to its aid."

The announcement that the Kelly local will throw its support to the drive marks the entrance of another organization to the large committee which represents many of the leading groups in Cumberland.

Budgets of Chest Agencies Reduced

Allotments Cut To 87 Per Cent

Eleven Community Chest agencies prepared to tighten their belts today as the Chest executive committee announced they must operate on reduced budgets during the three-month period beginning July 1.

Harold W. Smith, Chest president, was hopeful, however, that the allotments may be increased to normal after the end of September. He said last night that persons who failed to subscribe to the Chest during the campaign were to be solicited by mail for contributions.

The agencies have been receiving their full allotments during the first three months of the Chest fiscal year, but a check-up revealed that only 87 per cent of the approved budget can be paid during the next three months. The budget called for expenditure of $48,703.99, but only $42,516.41 is available. Agencies have already received over $12,000, leaving slightly more than $30,000 for the remaining nine-month period.

The monthly allotment for the agencies for the next three months follows: Jewish Welfare, $27.68; Travelers' Aid, $51.91; Baby Welfare, $83.06; Allegheny County League for Crippled Children, $138.43; Girl Scouts, $167.92; Boy Scouts, $220.94; Red Cross, $249.18; Allegheny Hospital, $517.67; Associated Charities, $621.51; Salvation Army, $631.22; and Central Y. M. C. A., $661.60.

Desire for Unity Aided Methodists, Dr. Bayley Asserts

Westminster, Md., June 11. (AP)—A real desire for union made the task of the Methodist uniting conference very simple, Dr. F. R. Bayley told the 11th annual convention of the Methodist Protestant church today.

Dr. Bayley, president of the judicial council of the newly unified church, described the council's action during the merger meeting. Mainly, he said, it was alert to keep the meeting, in the urgency of its desire to merge, from overstepping the authority delegated to it by the three branches of the church.

He also commented on the desire of the delegates to meet the demands of the modern day in setting up church machinery and establishing doctrine. The action on conscientious objectors in case of war he cited as an example. There, he said, the group aimed ultimately as permitting freedom of conscience rather than laying down rules.

Mrs. Wolfe Cited For Contempt

Sentence Is Suspended In 'Sit-Down' Dispute

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan wrote an anti-climactic "finis" to the dispute between Mrs. Emma Frances Wolfe and the State Roads Commission Saturday when he held the elderly widow guilty of contempt of court for her defiance of an injunction.

The jurist ruled, however, that Mrs. Wolfe had been "purged of contempt" upon payment of costs in the case.

Mrs. Wolfe was haled into court May 19, for sitting down in the path of an S. T. Brotemarkle Construction Company power-shovel that was to rip out a new entrance to the All Ghan Shrine Country Club after being served with a court order "strictly" prohibiting her from interfering with the work. Prior to issuance of the court order, she had delayed work on the entrance, necessitated by relocation of the Baltimore Pike, for almost two weeks.

The elderly widow, who felt that she was protecting land which she said had been entrusted to her by the Lord, made no defense when she was called into court on the contempt charge. She remained mute when Judge Sloan and Attorney W. Earle Coby sought to question her, pointing heavenward and to a Bible which she carried.

Judge Sloan adjourned the hearing after the State Roads Commission presented its case and called Mrs. Wolfe and her brother into chambers. What he said in chambers remains unknown, but Mrs. Wolfe left the court house smiling and interfered no more with the workmen, who completed most of the project the same day.

Church Trustee Dies, Two Women Companions Hurt

Walter M. Donaldson Is Crash Victim; Fails To Make Curve

A dying man and two seriously injured women were found in the front seat of a green sedan at Spring Gap early yesterday morning after their car plunged off the highway, snapped off a telephone pole, and smashed into a culvert.

Walter M. Donaldson, 41, of LaVale, the driver of the car, died at Memorial hospital of skull injuries an hour after he was admitted. He was taken to the hospital by an unidentified motorist.

Rushed to Hospital

The two women, Miss Effie Platt, 40, of 435 Baltimore avenue, and Miss Clarabelle Couter, 39, of 214 Pennsylvania avenue, were hurried to the hospital in two other cars, one driven by J. N. Nicholson, of 205 Fairfax street, and the other by Oscar Wisman, of 300 Grand avenue.

Both women were reported in fair condition last night, with attendants reporting that Miss Platt received a fractured skull, puncture wounds on the legs, and bruises, and Miss Couter, a fractured left leg, lacerations on the face, and bruises.

Donaldson, a clerk for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and a trustee of the Southminster Presbyterian church, left the Nine Mile House around midnight and started for Cumberland accompanied by his two passengers. It was learned.

Snaps Pole

The sedan driven by Donaldson, traveling on a downgrade at Spring Gap, failed to make the curve and crashed into the telephone pole on the left-hand side of the road. The pole snapped, and the car crashed into a culvert.

According to State Trooper Carl G. Storm, who investigated, the left front wheel of the car was smashed back under the clutch and brake of the car. The windshield was shattered, and the steering wheel bent straight up.

A number of Miss Platt's teeth were broken in the accident and were later found at the scene of the wreck. One tooth was found yesterday on the running board of the car at Shaver's garage.

The time of the accident was fixed at 12:45 a. m. at Memorial hospital. The patients were admitted around 1:15 a. m., and Donaldson died at 2:15.

World War Veteran

Donaldson is one of three brothers who served in France during the World War. All three men served for two years and never received a scratch. The two brothers, John B. of Cumberland, and William R. of LaVale, survive Mr. Donaldson.

Surviving him besides his two brothers are his wife, Mrs. Jean Patterson Donaldson, who married him ten years ago; his mother, Mrs. Effie Donaldson, who lived with her son at his home in LaVale; and a sister, Mrs. Claude W. Orndoff Sr. of Cumberland.

Average Cost of Producing Ton of Soft Coal Is $1.76

Washington, June 11. (P)—The Bituminous Coal Commission decided today the average cost of producing a ton of coal in Western Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, was $1.76.

The commission said the four state district mines about 18 per cent of the nation's soft coal tonnage.

Under the Guffey act, the commission was directed to fix minimum prices at the mines, at approximating the cost of production.

The new average costs for the middlewestern district represent a reduction of three cents a ton from the first average production costs determined a year and a half ago.

Prices for the district, the commission said, probably will be announced later this month, subject to final hearings on statistical data.

"The new prices for different grades of coal," the commission added, "will vary greatly, depending upon their relative values as to kind, grade and size. The law requires that the prices bring into each district a total amount of money, which, when divided by the number of tons the district has sold, will show an average yield per ton approximating the area's cost of production."

Production costs in the four fields comprising the middle western price area, the commission said, were: Western Kentucky $1.58 a ton; Illinois $1.75; Indiana $1.62 and Iowa $2.76.

Rubber Workers To Aid Nursery

Kelly Union To Sponsor Benefit Auto Show Here

Local No. 26, United Rubber Workers of America, today had voted to do their bit in the current drive for funds for the Keating Memorial Day Nursery. It was announced by Secretary Ernest M. Pueschel.

The Kelly-Springfield local will sponsor an auto show and six auto races at the Cumberland Fair grounds on July 2 as its contribution to the drive headed by L. F. Flynn, general chairman.

At the regular meeting Saturday, June 10, the general body of the local voted to donate one-third of their share of the total gate receipts for the continuance of the nursery program, Mr. Pueschel stated.

"The Kelly local decided to back the auto-racing program and show when it was learned that the Keating Memorial Day Nursery, which takes care of 100 children a day, might have to suspend operations unless the community came to its aid."

The announcement that the Kelly local will throw its support to the drive marks the entrance of another organization to the large committee which represents many of the leading groups in Cumberland.

Budgets of Chest Agencies Reduced

Allotments Cut To 87 Per Cent

Eleven Community Chest agencies prepared to tighten their belts today as the Chest executive committee announced they must operate on reduced budgets during the three-month period beginning July 1.

Harold W. Smith, Chest president, was hopeful, however, that the allotments may be increased to normal after the end of September. He said last night that persons who failed to subscribe to the Chest during the campaign were to be solicited by mail for contributions.

The agencies have been receiving their full allotments during the first three months of the Chest fiscal year, but a check-up revealed that only 87 per cent of the approved budget can be paid during the next three months. The budget called for expenditure of $48,703.89, but only $42,516.41 is available. Agencies have already received over $12,000, leaving slightly more than $30,000 for the remaining nine-month period.

The monthly allotment for the agencies for the next three months follows: Jewish Welfare, $27.68; Travelers Aid, $15.91; Baby Welfare, $83.96; Allegheny County League for Crippled Children, $138.43; Girl Scouts, $167.92; Boy Scouts, $220.94; Red Cross, $249.18; Allegheny Hospital, $517.67; Associated Charities, $621.51; Salvation Army, $531.22, and Central Y. M. C. A., $661.60.

Desire for Unity Aided Methodists, Dr. Bayley Asserts

Westminster, Md., June 11. (P)—A real desire for unity made the task of the Methodist uniting conference very simple, Dr. F. R. Bayley told the 11th annual convention of the Methodist Protestant churches today.

Dr. Bayley, president of the judicial council of the newly unified church, described the council's action during the merger meeting. Mainly, he said, it was alert to keep the meeting, in the urgency of its desire to merge, from overstepping the authority delegated to it by the three branches of the church.

He also commented on the desire of the delegates to meet the demands of the modern day in setting up church machinery and establishing doctrine. The action on conscientious objectors in case of war he cited as an example. There, he said, the group aimed ultimately at permitting freedom of conscience rather than laying down rules.

Lel Youth Lead, Minister Urges In Fort Hill Baccalaureate Talk

Calling for the world "to give youth a larger place in leadership," the Rev. Edgar S. Price declared that "we need not be afraid for our youth today" at the baccalaureate service for Fort Hill graduates yesterday afternoon.

"Youth is finding the real values of life," Mr. Price, pastor of Second Baptist church, said, adding that for this reason, they are "turning to Christianity."

Taking as his text a passage from St. Paul's Epistle to Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth," the minister asserted that today's young people are "going someplace."

"Youth looks out over a chaotic, war-torn world, in which governments are crumbling and nations collapsing under isms," Mr. Price said.

"With chaos engulfing the world, youth wants a faith to meet this condition. All else has failed, and youth is now turning to Christianity."

"It is a faith which supplies leadership through world chaos, understanding and direction; which points the way out, a faith centered in the future; a help for the present condition."

The speaker warned against "anti-Christian forces" which are directing their "poisonous propaganda" at youth in an effort "to lead him away to an out-worn, out-moded system of paganism."

These forces, he said, "look back 2,000 years to bones mixed with Caesar's clay. Like Lot's wife, they are fossilized, frozen in a backward look."

Christianity looks back, too, he declared, but it looks back to a "glorious empty tomb."

At the same time, he went on, it "looks upward to a reigning Savior and forward to a coming King."

Mr. Price pointed out that youth, a few years ago, "was sure he knew all the answers," while today, "he knows that he does not know."

Other participants in the service, held in the school auditorium, were the Rev. Elmer A. Welcher, pastor of Emmanuel Methodist church, and the Rev. C. K. Welch, pastor of Bethany United Brethren church.
